Allies Tighten Vise on Germans in Vosges

Fight Brews In Senate Over SPB Nominees

Hurley, Appointee, Was Named In War Contract Investigation

By Mary Spargo

A hot battle over Senate confirmation of former Democratic Governor Robert A. Hurley of Connecticut and Lieut. Col. Edward Heller of California, nominated as members of the three-man Surplus Property Board by President Roosevelt yesterday, appeared in the making within 15 minutes after the names reached Capitol Hill.

Legal restrictions apparently prevented the nomination at this time of the third board member. Senator Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa) is expected to get the post, but cannot be named to an office created by Congress during his membership in the Senate. Both Democrats and Republicans, however, were pleased by the reported decision to name Gillette. Gillette was defeated for reelection by Republican Gov. Bourke B. Hickenlooper.

Investigation Prompts Objections

Objections to the two appointments arose over an investigation of the war contracts and loans of the Narragansett Machine Co., of Pawtucket, R. I., which was disclosed by the House Military Affairs committee last September.

Hurley, as vice president of the company, was mentioned by the committee as receiving a $12,000 a year salary and spending as little as one day a week at the plant." Hurley had "no specified duties," the report said.

Heller, a San Francisco banker and industrialist, is a finance officer in the office of the fiscal director of the War Department in Boston. He is ni charge of war contracts and loans to war manufacturers in the New England area.

Loans Caused Investigation

War Department-guaranteed loans to the Rhode Island concern were the precipitating cause of the House committee's investigation.

The committee pointed out that Norman T. Bolles, vice president and general manager of the Narragansett company, had been indicted by Thomas E. Dewey, then district attorney, in New York on a charge of grand larceny in the first degree. The report said the "amount of money involved was $5000."

"However, the record indicates," the House report stated, "that the indictment was dismissed upon the agreement of Bolles to settle for an

Union Heads Refuse to End Phone Strike

By International News Service

Leaders of 5000 striking Ohio telephone workers refused in a lengthy session with the War Labor Board last night to call off the walkout and the WLB retired into executive session to debate further action.

Robert G. Pollock of Cleveland, president of the Ohio Federation of Telephone Workers, an independent union, told the WLB that he had not ordered the strikers back to work and did not believe any union leader could conscientiously do so.

The walkout began in Dayton, Ohio, where 500 operators struck in protest against the employment of 105 "transferees" from other Ohio communities who are paid an average of $18.25 weekly for living expenses in adddition to their regular salaries.

Union's Proposed Solution

"I don't believe any union leader could conscientiously order a girl making $21 a week to work alongside another girl making approximately $39 on the same job," Pollock said.

Pollock and Ernest Weaver, of Chicago, regional director for the National Federation of Telephone Workers, the parent union, said that the solution to the dispute was

BULLETIN

Pearl Harbor, Nov. 21 (INS).—Pacific fleet headquarters disclosed tonight that U. S. Army and Marine infantry units operating in the Marianas and the Palau islands killed 63,388 Japanese and captured 3268 through Novembre 13.

The summary of casualties covered U. S. drives on Saipan, Guam and Tinian in the Marianas, and Angaur and Peleliu in the Palaus. The American forces are continuing to clear the captured islands of remnants of Japanese garrisons, the communique said.

'Big 3' Talks Not Set, Says Roosevelt

He Doesn't Know When Meeting Will Take Place, President Asserts

By Edward T. Folliard

President Roosevelt said yesterday that he didn't know when the next meeting of the Big Three would take place. He advised reporters against writing speculative stories about it, but at the some time removed any impression that he was packed and ready to leave.

There is the possibility now that he and Prime Minister Churchill and Marshal Stalin may not get together until after the fourth-term inauguration on January 20.

At yesterday's White House news conference, Mr. Roosevelt was asked if there had been any "snag" in the planning for a new meeting oof the Big Three.

Hopes for Meeting

He answered that he and the other two leaders continue to hope that a meeting will be held as soon as possible. Asked whether the meeting would take place before the end of the year, Mr. Roosevelt said that he didn't know.

The President was reminded of certain tasks that lay ahead, the preparation of his mesage on the state of the Union, for example, and his budget message and the inauguration itself. Could it be assumed, he was asked, that in view of these things there would be no journey abroad until after he has taken the oath for a fourth term?

Well, the President said, there are operational problems, and travel problems and all sorts of problems; but he wouldn't write a story about it.

Held Too Speculative

The whole matter was too highly speculative, he added.

Reports of a second meeting of the big three, a sequel to the Teheran conference, have been current ever since the Roosevelt-Churchill war conference in Quebec last September.

Marshal Stalin wired his regrets on that occasion, explaining that he was too busy directing the Red army's offensive to leave Russia.

The talk of another meeting was given an air of urgency right after President Roosevelt's reelection when Prime Minister Churchill, addressing the House of Commons, said it was "high time" for the Big Three to get together again.

However, there has been nothing to indicate that any actual plans were started for such a meeting.

President Roosevelt, in his mention yesterday of operational problems, apparently was referring to Marshal Stalin, who now, just as was the case in September, is actually directing the operations of the Red army on the Eastern Front.

Mulhouse Near Fall; Allies Gain Along Line

Yanks Capture Sarrebourg; New Advances Scored In Aachen Area

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, Paris, Nov. 21 (AP).—French armored units forced their way into Mulhouse and the American Seventh Army captured Sarrebourg today in twin advances which tightened the stranglehold Lieut. Gen. Jacob L. Devers' Sixth Army Group has locked around German troops in the Vosges Mountains.

Far to the north there were indications that the Germans were about to lose another important city—bitterly contested Eschweiler—where the U. S. First Army was fighting a savage house-to-house battle inside the city even while other units closed in toward the stronghold from both the north and scuth.

The U. S. Ninth and British Second Armies forged steadily deeper into Germany around Aachen and below Metz Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army joined in the pressure on the Germans' crumbling southern front.

Big Industrial City

Gen. Charles DeGaulle himself made the announcement that the French First Army, striking northward from its foothold on the Rhine, had driven against Mulhouse, big industrial city 17 miles north of Basel, Switzerland.

The French continued to pour troops through Belfort Gap and a dispatch from the front said the city of Belfort itself was expected to be cleared up soon despite heavy fighting still ranging in the southern sector of the fortress.

Sarrebourg, 70 miles northwest of Mulhouse and 40 east of Nancy, was occupied by Lieut. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's Seventh Army in a five-mile thrust toward the frontier metropolis of Strasbourg.

Nazis Outflanked

With the French already outflanking the Germans on the south, the Seventh Army's drive to within 32 miles of the Rhine pinned the German 19th Army against the river and presented the enemy with the need of quick decision whether to pull back or be pocketed.

(An Associated Press dispatch from Switzerland declared French artillery already had laid waste a 6-mile stretch of Germany's Rhineland north from the Swiss frontier, smashing villages and railway installations on the German side of the stream from Weil to Istein.)

On most of the American Seventh and Third Army Fronts in France the Germans fell back toward Ttrasbourg and Saarbrucken, with even their rearguard resistance disorganized by the intense pressure to which they were being subjected.

But further north, where the Nazis were fighting on their own soil with their backs to the Roer and the Saar Rivers, the enemy was hurling in armor and artillery in a desperate effort to stem the advances of the American First and Ninth Armies and the British Second.

Batile in Rain, Mud

Floundering forward through a steady rain and dep mud, Lieut. Gen. Courtney Hodges' First Army completed the clearing of Stolberg, 5 miles east of Aachen; fought its way deeper into the heavily mined city of Eschweiler, 7 miles northeast of Aaachen; cleared the village of Rohe, just west of Eschweiler, and pushed into Hehlrath, a village a mile northwest of Eschweiler.

Fighting was raging from house to house in Hehlrath and Hodges' doughboys beat off a determined Nazi counterattack near Heistern, southeast of Eschweiler.

Lieut. Gen. William Simpson's Ninth Army troops, who repulsed a counterattack by from 20 to 30 German tanks Monday near Schleiden, 4 miles north of Eschweiler, slugged their way 1500 yards nearer the Roer southeast of Gellenkirchenn today, clearing the towns of Gereonsweiler, Freialdhoven, Niedermertz and Ungershaugen.

(The Ninth Army advanced 1 to 2 miles along the entire front to

New Red Jabs Rip Nazi Lines On 2 Fronts

Soviets' Advances Reported by Berlin, Ignored by Moscow

London, Nov. 21 (AP).—A new Russian offensive in Czechoslovakia and northeast Hungary between Ungvar and Tokaj has torn several holes in the German defenses while a strong drive in southwest Latvia ripped for the third day into the Nazis pocketed around Ventspils and Liepaja, Berlin reported tonight.

Moscow ignored both sectors, the night Russian communique telling only of a small gain in a line-straightening operation west of Eger in northeast Hungary and the virtual clearance of the Baltic Island of Saare.

Five towns were captured in Hungary, the principal one being the railway station if Verpelet, 8 miles southwest of Eger, the Soviet communique said.

It said nothing of the continuing siege of Budapest from points south and southeast of the Hungarian capital, and said there were no changes on any other fronts except in the narrow southern peninsula os Saare (Osel) Island, covering the entrance to the Gulf of Riga.

There the sudden Russian attack took 18 populated places and compressed the isolated enemy into a "vest" pocket 4½ miles deep which is being shelled from all points, Moscow announced. With their backs to the sea, the Germans were in a hopeless plight.

On the mainland in southwest Latvia the much larger German forces—estimated by Premier Stalin at 30 divisions—which have been trapped for weeks, were in somewhat similar plight.

'We've Got to Fight Like Hell'

Gestapo Forcing Death Battle On Germans, Eisenhower Says

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, Paris, Nov. 21 (AP).—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower declared today that there had been some reason to believe Germany might have cried quits after the battle of France, but that Adolf Hitler and his Gestapo had managed to maintain their pistol-in-the-back control of the Reich and that the war had become a fight to the death for the German people.

"To get peace we've got to fight like hell for it," Eisenhower told a press conference. "Now let's do it."

Eisenhower implied strongly that he expected the German command to try to fight out the present batttle west of the Rhine rather than retreat voluntarily to the east bank.

Any soldier probably would be forced to that decision once he had so much of his force west of the River, Eisenhower said, pointing out that Allied air mastery was so great that any full scale withdrawal across the river was bound to prove costly even in bad weather.

Situation Parallels Normandy

The Germans have not much more choice than they had in Normandy, he indicated. There they might have been able to delay the Allies by falling back from one defensive line to another, but could not do so because the bomb-shattered roads and bridges made it virtually impossible to extricate any great percentage of the forces already committed to battle.

Returning from a tour that took him to all sectors of the front, Eisenhower said with quiet determination that the great power of Allied armies had been thrown into the present campaign to force Germany to surrender or be destroyed. His plan, he said, was to hammer the Germans with increasing force until the highest pressure was reached on the day they finally surrendered.

"Unless everyone all the way through the nation—those at the front and those at home—keeps on the job everlastingly and with mounting intensity, we are only postponing the day of victory," he asserted.

Asks More Men, Supplies

For this last great effort, he said, he wanted, and was confident that he would get, more men and—most of all—more supplies.

"I want more supplies than we are getting and I think the soldier wants more than he is getting, both now and in the future," the general went on.

He made plain that he intended no criticism of previous or present home front efforts, but was simply making a forthright appraisal of the needs of the inteisifying Allied effort.

"There is a job her for every man fit for battle that we can bring in, and it's up to every man back home to give him everything he needs—that is my prescription for victory," Eisenhower said.

While he declined even to guess how soon victory would come, he saiad even the Nazis were human enough to break under sufficient pressure and in the face of enough defeats, and it was his intention to run the pressure up to that point without a single lull from now on.

Optimistic, Not Complacent

"I am optimistic, myself," he said, but adde dwith a chuckle, "I do hope to prevent myself from becoming complacent."

In response to an inquiry whether the situation was brighteratpres er the situation was brighter at present than had been anticipated for this distance from D-Day, he said it was decidedly brighter in one respect, as no one on D-Day would have believed that the Allies by November would have been massed before the Siegfried Line in such strength as they are.

He conceded, however, that on D-Day most persons would have doubted the German ability to keep

Jap Defense Is Cracking In Limon Area

500 Nipponese Slain Trying to Rescue Trapped Comrades

Allied Headquarters, Leyte, Philippines (Wednesday), Nov. 22 (AP).—Japanese resistance inside the shellchurned "Limon Pocket" of northern Leyte is nearing the breaking point and hard-fighting American doughboys have killed more than 500 Japanese trying to rescue the trapped garrison, front dispatches reportedtoday.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's daily war bulletin, meanwhile, revealed for the first time that American heavy bombers were operating from Leyte airfields and had destroyed supply dumps and crippled two coastal vessels in a raid on the west coast port of Palompon, 20 miles southwest of Limon.

The bulletin said that the U. S. Thirty-second Division was maintaining unrelenting pressure on the Limon pocket where some 3000 Japanese of the crack First Division have been trapped for more than a week.

MacArthur said that the rugged terrain ideally suited for defense was forcing his commanders to use "time-consuming" tactics in order to crush enemy resistance with a minimum of American losses.

American artillery was blasting the pocket night and day. Men of the 24th Division, fighting between Talliboa, a mile west of Limon, and Katagbakan, two miles southeast of Limon, on the west side of the Limon-Ormoc highway killed more than 500 Japanese in the past three days in thwarting enemy attempts to break into the pocket.

Japs Attempt Infiltration

East of the highway, the front dispatch reported, the Japanese were trying to infiltrate the America nlines, in a maneuver which MacArthur said was designed to smash American artillery posts and supply dumps.

Scattered Japanese units succeeded in reaching the American-held north coastal road which runs along Carigara Bay, it said.

It added one small group brought the section of the coastal road between Pinamopoan and Capoocan, four miles to the east, under light machine-gun fire, knocking out eight American vehicles. One vehicle hit was an ambulance and the Japanese later bayonetted a wounded man riding in it.

House Leaders Back Congress Reorganization

McCormick, Martin Unite for House Action This Session

By Robert C. Albright

Long pending legislation for a thoroughgoing congressional modernization study yesterday received a House leadership "green light."

House Majority Leader John W. McCormack (D., Mass.) joined Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr. (R., Mass.) in support of the bipartisan move.

Speaker Sam Rayburn meanwhile conferred with House and Senate authors of the Senate-passed Maloney-Monroney resolution.

Will Request Hearings

Rayburn told newsmen he had promised to request the House Rules Committee to hold hearings this session on the legislation.

The Speaker indicated the Maloney-Monroney measure and somewhat similar proposals by the House Smith Committee might be considered by the Rules group at the same time.

The Senate-passed measure is jointly sponsored by Senator Francis Maloney (D., Conn.) and Representative A. S. (Mike) Monroney (D., Conn.).

It provides for a 12-man joint House and Senate committee, with both political parties equally represented, to study means of improving the organization and operation of Congress and its relationship with the executive departments.

"Expert" Staffing a Phase

Improved "expert" staffing of Congress, also recommended in the House Smith report, would be covered in the study, along with proposals for streamlining often conflicting committee jurdisdictions in the two Houses.

Maloney and Monroney have been stressing the urgency of action by the House this session. Otherwise, Senate passage would be nullified by adjournment, and entirely new legislation would have to be introduced in the new Congress.

"It will save six months in setting up the 12-man Congressional committee and getting it to work," said Monroney.

The new House would have to continue the authorization in any

Nelson Named Personal Envoy Of President

Designation of Donald M. Nelson as personal representative of the President before he returned to China to finish seting up a Chinese war production board was announced yesterday by the White House.

In a leter to the former WPB chairman dated November 2, the President instructed him to attend cabinet metings and "to obtain such assistance as you may require from existing Government agencies."

The President has enlarged his "cabinet" to include other officials beside the heads of the ten "departments" in the past. War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes, Economic Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson, Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt, Vice President Henry A. Wallace and others regularly attend cabinet meetings.

The appointment was made effective September 30 when Nelson resigned from the WPB chairmanship. It is understood that Nelson plans to devote much of his time to the stimulation of foreign trade, although it was understood that he would also receive domestic assignments.

The President's letter to Nelson follows:

"I am hereby appointing you as personal representative of the President, effective September 30, 1944. You will attend Cabinet meetings and are empowered to obtain such assistance as you may require from existing Government agencies.

"We have a vast and difficult job to do in achieving complete and final victory and in working out the basis of an enduring peace. Your knowledge, experience and abilitiesca n be of great value to me in my work. At the present time, I should like you to advise and assist me in dealing with some of the most important prob-

Petrillo Complains

Teaching by Marine Bandsmen When Off Duty Protested

By the United Press

Marine Corps headquarters announced receipt of a letter from James C. Petrillo, president of the American Federation of Musicians (AFL), forwarding a protest against certain Marine Corps band members alleged to have given music lessons when off duty.

The Marine Corps said a reply to the protest is being prepared.

Petrillo, who last week concluded his long fight with two leading recording companies with an estimated four-million-dollar victory, was said to have dispatched the letter after a Washington musician and union member complained that Marine Band members were gobbling up his pupils.

After a 23-month dispute, in which Petrillo defied recommendations of the War Labor Board and President Roosevelt, the two recording firms last week signed contracts with provisions which will net the union an estimated four million dollars a year.

CIO'S Music Turned Off

Chicago, Nov. 21 (AP).—Delegates to the CIO convention at the Stevens Hotel yesterday wondered why the music being played on a phonograph at their war exhibit stopped.

It stopped because representatives of the American Federation of Musicians (AFL) asked that the phonograph be turned off.

Edward A. Benkert, secretary of the musicians' Chicago local, said that according to an agreement with all Chicago hotels an AFM record turner must supervise the music box when recorded music is dispensed.

Rabies-Infected Puppy Invades School, Bites 8

Glen Burnie, Md., Nov. 21 (AP).—A rabies-infected puppy bit or scratched eight students of the Glen Burnie High School yesterday and the pupils will receive antirabies treatment within the next few days, Anne Arundel authorities disclosed today.

The puppy wandered into the school during a change of classes and bit or scratched the pupils on the hands or ankles. The dog was locked up until Charles H. Kreider, dog warden, arrived. Laboratory examination showed the dog was infected, the county health department reported.

Blames Reporter as 'Deaf'

President Admits to 'Damn,' Denies Deity Was Mentioned

President Roosevelt yesterday admitted that he uttrered a "damn" when he was voting at Hyde Park on ovember 7, but denied emphatically that he took the name of the Diety in vain. He said that the reporter of Time Magazine, who alleged that he did, must have been deaf.

Time, in its account of the incident, said:

"From the green-curtained voting booth came a clank of gears as the main control lever jerked irritably back and forth. The na voice, familiar to all of the United States and to most of the world, spoke distinctly from behind the curtains: 'The goddamned thing won't work.'"

The Glendale Ministerial Association of Glendale, Calif., announced on November 16 that it was writing to President Roosevelt to ask himb to apologize for his "shocking profanity."

At yesterday's White House news conference a reporter asked the President if he had said anything "sinister" in the Hyde Park polling booth. Mr. Roosevelt answered that he "didn't know who the fellow was who had written the story, but he was going to withdraw his

The Army chaplain corps for the first time wil lhave two generals, if nominations submitted yesterday by President Roosevelt are approved by the Senate.

Brig. Gen. William R. Arnold, Chief of Chaplains, was nominated to be a major general. Chaplains never have been headed by a major general and it took a special act of Congress to permit this promotion. Col. George F. Rixey, who will be deputy to Arnold, was named for promotion to brigadier general.

Mr. Roosevelt also nominated yesterday Brig. Gen. William J. Donovan of the Cavalry Reserve, head of the Office of Strategic Services, to be a major general; Maj. Gen. Wilhelm D. Styer of the Engineers to be a lieutenant general and David Sarnoff, colonel in the Signal Corps reserve and chairman of the board of the Radio Corporation of America, to be a brigadier general.

In all, the promotion list included 23 new major generals and 23 brigadier generals.

Those nominated to be major generals (temporary) follow (the address given is usual home address unless otherwise indicated):

Woman Sniper Shoots Yank, He Kills Her

Leyte, Nov. 21. (AP).—Rifle in one hand, telephone in the other, Corpl. Mills H. Stephens, from Raleigh, N. C., called his command post from a water-filled foxhole south of Ormoc:

"There's something outside my hole . . ."

The sound of a scuffle came over the phone.

"Something hit me on the shoulder. I grappled with it, then it jumped off," Stephens resumed.

"I knew it was too fast for a Jap, and I took another look. It was a monkey."

Romanian Regime Hit

Moscow, Nov. 21 (U.P.).—Prof. Alexander Yereusalimsky, Russian publicist who has just returned from Bucharest, wrote in the army newspaper Red Star today that the Romanian government formed after the country's capitulation "has not shown a determination to release the country from the society of Fascist criminals."

Russians are beginning to display impatience at the "uncompromising" attitude of Romania's rulers, Yereusalimsky said. Reports of sabotage of armistice terms, political corruption and entrenchment of the old ruling parties have reached Moscow.

amount almost twice that named in the indictment."

Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Col.), third ranking member of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, told The Washington Post yesterday:

"I think it is very likely that the Military Affairs Committee will have to hold hearings upon these appointments."

Hurley was given the post as vice president of the Narragansett firm "primarily for the credit effect" before a second loan of two million dollars was obtained by the company from the Federal Reserve bank in March, 1943, with "a 100 per cent guaranty by the War Department," the report said. The first loan, alos for two million dollars, was guaranteed 90 per cent by the War Department.

Hurley's appointment to the $12,000 job was made in January of the same year the second loan was obtained.

"Bolles atempted to justify this employment on the ground that Hurley's association with the company strengthened the morale of the plant personnel," the House committee reported.

The report detailed the stock transactions of the company, which had a capitalization of $850,000 at the time the first loan was made. In April, 1943, a statement listed the amount of contracts the company received from the Government as $3,381,252.89.

The concern had subcontracted with the Ford Motor Co. to manufacture gun mounts at $2100 each.

The House Military group reported that its investigation indicated that actually "it cos $6000 to manufacture each gun mount."

It was pointed out that it was Boston ordnance officers who were primarily responsible for having the War Department guarantee the Narragansett loans.

"If the responsible Army officials had been cognizant of the stock transactions and manipulations as shown by the evidence adduced at the hearings, and notwithstanding such knowledge had proceeded to develop and support this facility for war production purposes, they were open to criticim; and if they did not know, they were equally so because they had the same opportunity to learn the true facts as the committee had."

Himmler Creates 'Lidice' of Town In East Prussia

London (Tuesday), Nov. 21 (U.P.). A British press dispatch from Stockholm reported early today that Heinrich Himmler, German home front dictator and Gestapo chief, had created the first German "Lidice" by obliterating the East Prussian village of Nemmersdorf because its people disobeyed orders to evacuate it.

(Lidice is the Czechoslovak town which the Germans leveled, killing its men, women and children, on the ground that Czech patriots had sheltered the killers of Gestapo leader "Hangman" Reinhard Heydrich.)

$127 Painting Identified As a $50,000 Trumbull

Chicago, Nov. 20 (AP).—Bailey Stanton, Chicago attorney, today said a portrait which he bought in Nowe York a year ago for $127 "to dress up" his office, may be an early American masterpiece worth $50,000.

The picture was sthamped the work of John Trumbull (1756-1839) and Stanton said it was identified by Maurice Goldblatt, are director of the University of Notre Dame Galleries, as the portrait of Lafayette. Goldblatt said it was superior to Trumbull's Alexander Hamilton, for which the late Andrew Mellon paid $100,000.

Commentators Paint Situation as Grave On Western Front

London, Nov. 21 (AP).—The German people got from their military reporters tdoay a sombre account of German armies yielding ground before an Allied offensive "which has not yet reached its peak."

Abandonment of their Eschweiler salient in the Aachen sector, trapping of a German garrison in Metz, the American Seventh Army's drive to Sarrebourg, the spectacular French breakthrough to the Rhine—all were broadcast by Berlin, sometimes in pessimistic trms.

Most of th German accounts emphasized the danger to the Reich represented by the Belfort breakthrough. The situation along the Rhine was usually described cautiously as still "too fluid" for conclusions on its ultimate importance, but Martin Hallensleben, German correspondent, said flatly it "might well place the Germans in a prerarious situation."

Stand Seen Diffirult

Hallensleben said the Aachen and Metz fronts had developed into "mammoth battles of material," and added "there can be no doubt that the German defense will find it difficult to make a stand against this onrush of packed power."

More cautious, Transocean's correspondent Ludwig Sertorious said the Belfort breakthrough could not yet "actually be termed critical, "but admitted that it offered an opportunitly to the Allies to destroy the entire Vosges line of the Germans by rolling up its rear with an advance northward along the Rhine.

The Berlin radio, quoting a spokesman of the high command, said " the position of the breakthrough area on the upper Rhine is such that it calls for the most energetic counter measures."

Alex Schmalfuss, a German war correspondent, broadcast:

"For sheer weight of material and relentless ferocity the battle east of Aachen is the greatest of the whole war. In this phase of the war, where really great regions are at stake and long range weapons play an important role, breaches in our positions do not mean much."

Sertorious said the Ninth American Army northeast of Aachen "has made some tactical gain of ground and has occupied several villages," an dhe reported also that the Seventh Army, having thrown in the bulk of its trength between the Rhine-Marne Canal and the central Vosges, was "pressing strongly toward Sarrebourg with concentrated forces."

Still Have Reserves

Another Berlin broadcast said the offensive toward the Saar by the Seventh Army and the right flank of Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army involved 10 to 12 divisions in the area from Sarrebourg to Sarreguemines, and the German News Agency reported bitter fighting in Sarrebourg itself after American troops had crossed the Saar River and the Rhine-Marne Canal.

A withdrawal from the Eschweiler salient on the Aachen front was announced by Berlin, but Sertorious implied that the bulk of German strength on this front had not been thrown into action. He said the British were massing for still another major attack in the vicinity of Venlo, and that until this attack began, the German high command would hold its operational reserves, to gauge the sector of greatest danger.

Summing up the situation on the west front, Hallensleben asserted "the German opportunity now lies chiefly in an element of attrition, by forcing the enemy into a series of costly engagements wich will exhaust his supplies and make room for German counterattacks."

Mr. Roosevelt noticed that the thing didn't click. He had another go at it, he related, and then it locked. Nearby was an old friend, Tom Leonard, the vooting registrar, and the President said to him: "The damn thing won't work."

That was what actually happened, the President told the White House news conference, and he accused the Time reporter of adding another short word which he didn't use.

"I have no faith in this board's ability to solve our problem," Pollock asserted.

J. J. Moran, vice president of the national federation, told the board that if a satisfactory solution was not forthcoming quickly the conutry would face the most serious communications problem in its history in the next few days. He said the union was anxious to see the dispute settled, but that the strike was spreading.

Violence in Truck Strike

Boston, Nov. 21 (U.P.).—With the first outburst of violence reported, the regional War Labor Board today ordered 5000 AFL union truck drivers to end their nine-day wildcat strike immediately and return to work or face severe penalties, including cancellation of draft deferments.

The directive, unanimously approved by the full board, came as three huge vans of a Rochester, N. Y., trucking concern were stoned about 5 miles north of the Topsfield State Police barracks on the Newburyport turnpike.

In the directive, directors of the strike were ordered to return to work immediately, and others to report for work on their next shift. Names of workers who refuse to comply with the directive were ordered referred to the National War Labor Board which would:

1. Notify the draft boards to cancel deferments.

2. Bar strikers from work in companies engaged in war contracts.

3. Refuse to grant certificates of availability to the strikers permitting them to obtain employment elsewhere.

Conveyor Causes Dispute

Watervliet, N. Y., Nov. 21 (AP).—A union spokesman said today a work stoppage involving about 1000 employes of the Allegheny Ludlum Steel Co.'s Watervliet plant resulted from a dispute over installation of an automatic conveyor.

The spokesman, who declined use of his name, described the walkout as "entirely unauthorized." He said members of the United Steel Workers of America, Local 2478 (CIO), left their jobs because of a personnel reduction due to the "technological change."

Steel Production Halted

Gary, Ind., Nov. 21 (U.P.).—A strike of 39 cranemen at Carnegie-Illinois Steel Co. halted all steel production today at the company's Gary works, the world's largest steel plant, and forced 5500 workers into idleness.

Workers remaining at the plant were producing coke and pig iron, but the shutdown of 58 open-hearth furnaces stopped all production of steel ingots, a company spokesman said. The plant employs 18,000 workers.

Officials of the United Steel Workers Union (CIO) said the strike was unauthorized.

Shell Case Output Stopped

Portsmouth, Ohio, Nov. 21 (U.P.).—Production of bomb and shell cases at the Portsmouth works of the Wheeling Steel Corp. was halted today by a sympathy strike of approximately 4500 production workers in protest against the dismissal of a plant guard.

Officials of the United Steelworkers Union (CIO) said that the strike was not authorized and urged the men return to their jobs.

The guard, Maurice J. Caldwell, reportedl ywas discharged for "insubordination."

event, but with select committee investigations this is usually a matter of rountine form.

Immediate Action Favored

McCormack told newsmen he personally favored action this session. Earlier, McCormack sat with Rayburn on the Maloney-Monroney conference.

House Republican Leader Martin told reporters he already had assured Maloney and Monroney he would like to see action this session.

Martin said there were so many points of agreement between their resolution and the more recent House Smith Committee recommendations that he saw no reason why the Rules Committee could not work out any differences and approve a joint investigation encompassing all of the reorganization points.

"So far as I am concerned, the sooner we do it the better," said Martin. "I would like to see the committee set up at once."

fighting after such defeats as they have suffered.

By last August, he said, it became apparent that the German leaders, who have nothing to lose by continuing the war, possessed in the Gestapo a weapon powerful enough to compel the German people to fight on.

Germany is being stripped bare to continue the fight, he said, and the people's army is capable for every effective combat when put behind fortifications or in trenches, despite poor equipment and lack of training.

Such troops, when put into trenches with the knowledge that they will be shot in the back if they try to leave, can be formidable opponents, Eisenhower warned.

Speaking of recent operations, he said "Walcheren Island was one of the most gallant actions of this war; the Navy really deserved great kudos. The Canadian and British armies did a splendid and aggressive piece of work in clearing up the areas at that end of the line."

At the other end of the line he highly praised the French breakthrough to the Rhine, saying, "no single instance has pleased me so much in a long while as the capture of Belfort by the gallant French army and its reaching the Rhine."

7749 Ocean Flights

New York (U.P.).—Pan American World Airways on May 31 completed 7749 trans-oceanic crossings since Pearl Harbor. These included 3830 flights for the Air Transport Command of the Army Air Force and 3919 for the Naval Air Transport Service. They were crossings of the Atlantic and Pacific only and do not include special missions.

within 2000 yards of the River Roer, taking several towns, Associated Press Correspondent Wes Gallagher said in a late dispatch. The towns included Langweiler, Laurensburg, Englesdorf and Merzenhausen.)

Hodges' troops drove more than a half mile beyond the village of Heistern, 3 miles southeast of Eschweiler, while the Nazis fought bitterly to keep their defenses from crumbling, a front dispatch said, adding that the fighting was hardest in woods southeast of Eschweiler.

Northeast of Geilenkirchen, 10 miles north of Aachen, British troops drove through strongly defended Siegrfied Line positions almost to the outskirts of Wurm, 3½ miles from Geilenkirchen, after beating off two German counterattacks.

Other British outfits, picking their way through a maze of mines and slush in southeastern Holland, beat forward within 5½ miles of the German Maas River bastion of Venlo and moved steadily forward on a 7-mile front.

(A late dispatch from Associated Press Correspondent Ned Nordness said British and American troops and armor "found it sticky going in the Geilenkirchen area." Greatly increased resistance was met.

(The captured town of Hamich, 9 miles east of Aachen and 6 miles from the important road center of Duren, was described in another front dispatch as a monument of ruins to the most savage action First Army troops yet had known.

("In two broken counterattacks that they had put in here, the Germans suffered enormous casualties, only about 1 Nazi in every 10 getting back out of town again," Associated Press Correspondent William S. Wihte wrote. "Bodies of German dead have been carried out by the truckload. So big has the job of clearance that some still lie here in the mud and under pulverized stone heaps that had once been buildings, gray and shapeless bundles under the rain.")

The fiercest enemy resistance on Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army Front was in the area of Merzig, 4 miles inside the German Saar, where the Tenth Armored Division repulsed a strong Nazi counterattack and then pushed on another mile against heavy enemy fire. At last report Patton's tanks were about 3 miles inside Germany at this point and within a mile of Merzig, which is on the east bank of the Saar River.

Inside the fortress city of Metz two diehard Nazi pockets continued to hold out on two islands in the Moselle River in the northwest part of the city and garrisons of five bypassed fortress groups continued to fire sporadically.

Some of the 3100 prisoners captured in the Metz area reported that about 600 Germans still were holding out in Fort Driant, on the west bank of the Moselle south of Metz, but said they were running short of supplies.

Southeast of Metz, Patton's infantry registered gains described in field dispatches as up to 3 miles, with the 26th Division overrunning Falkenburg (Falquemont) in the old Maginot Line 20 miles southwest of Saarbrucken. The 34th Division closed in on Hellimer; 10 miles east-southeast of Falkenburg.

Seventh Army troops pushing eastward from the Blamont area reported the Germans were falling back so rapidly they did not even plant the usual minefields, and there were many indications the enemy troops were on their way to the Rhine.

Battlefront dispatches disclosed that the First French Armored Division in its thrust to the flatlands beyond the Vosges Mountains reached the Rhine at Huningen, Kembs and Rosenay and had captured at least four other towns in their northward thrust toward Mulhouse.

The French said that their armored units which swept past abandoned German tanks arrived on the west bank in time to see German troops attempting to swing across the stream, swollen by rains. They said one ferry sank under the weight of Nazis who climbed aboard with quantites of loot ,including household silver and radios.

Philippine Battle

By Ernest Lindley

Naval Strategy Now Questioned

In naval circles satisfaction with the second Battle of the Philippines is less complete than the public may have been led to think from the first accounts. This could be sensed by close reading of the excellent coordinated description of the battle issued last week by the Navy Department.

LINDLEY

In this summary the number of Japanese warships definitely listed as sunk in that triple engagement is somewhat smaller than in the earlier reports from the far Pacific. This does not mean that the earlier reports were incorrect. It means only that on review, absolute proof seemed to be lacking in a few cases. Even with the slightly revised figures, however, Japanese losses, in ships sunk, were very heavy and important compared to ours.

Accurate comparisons of ships damaged, but not sunk, in the two navies, cannot be made. Obviously the exact degree of damage done to many Japanese ships which escaped, or may have escaped, could not be ascertained. And for security reasons, the damage done to our ships is rarely disclosed. Here again, the toll exacted of the Japanese probably was considerably greater than they exacted of us. Moreover, we can better afford losses and damage because we have more warships, more ship yards, and more extensive repair facilities. Our losses in personnel also can be replaced, but that does not make those which occur any more agreeable.

THE MOST significant point, which is at least partially confirmed by the official account published last week, is, however, that the Japanese plan came uncomfortably close to success in what must have been its main objective: the destruction of the shipping in the Gulf of Leyte on which MacArthur's invasion depended.

The critical question is why San Bernardino Strait, through which came the most powerful, on the surface, of the three Japanese task forces, was left so lightly guarded. Battleships of the Seventh Fleet met and wrecked the southern Japanese task force. The Third Fleet pursued, with eminent success, the northern Japanese force, sinking all four of its carriers. But only six small and slow escort carriers and their protecting destroyers and destroyer escorts stood between the central Japanese task force and the Gulf of Leyte. They fought valiantly, suffered heavy losses and inflicted some, and would have been annihilated if the enemy had not suddenly turned and fled.

In the Navy Department's account, no reason is suggested for the failure to guard adequately the exit from San Bernardino Strait except that the central Japanese force had been seen to turn back the preceding evening. That, as it developed, was a ruse. Meanwhile, apparently, all of Halsey's Third Fleet, with its fast carriers and battleships, had gone north. If the purpose of the northern Japanese force was to draw off the Third Fleet, it was achieved, although at grevious cost to the Japanese.

IN THE FIRST Battle of the Philippines Sea, during the invasion of the Marianas, Admiral Spruance, in command of the Fifth Fleet, had a somewhat similar decision to make. His fast carrier force, under Admiral Mitscher, made contact with a Japanese task force west of the Marianas. Mitscher could not pursue that tempting target without getting too far away to protect our invasion shipping off the Marianas. Spruance could not be sure that a second powerful Japanese force would not come down from the north to attack this shipping. The decision was to play it safe. It was criticized by some experts, but the consensus seems to be that it was correct.

Halsey's decision in the Second Battle of the Philippines to go after the northern Japanese force with everything he had is now being debated in naval circles. Some contend he should have left his battleships to guard the exit from San Bernardino Strait, especially since he did not need them to defeat and rout the northern enemy force.

The net result of the Second Battle of the Philippines was a great victory. But Halsey's decision is likely to be debated for a long time to come. The verdict may be left to the naval experts. The encouraging thing to the lay observer is the debate itself, which indicates that in spite of its series of magnificent successes, the Navy has not turned complacent or lost its capacity for searching self-examination.

Refrigerator, Washer Ban Is Eased by New WPB Order

By Christine Sadler

The War Production Board yesterday broadened the scope of its spot authorization procedure to make it cover the production of electric refrigerators, washing machines and several other items not made for civilians during the war.

Radios were not included on the list, and so remain the major household "appliance" still forbidden for other than war purposes.

WPB warned the order does not mean refrigerators and washing machines will be made immediately, but manufacturers can make application and if they can show an availability of manpower, plant facilities and materials their request may be approved.

Small motors for all power-driven equipment are extremely short, bgut it is believed several plants will be able to assemble models ready for the motors to be installed later. Since motors are usually made in other plants, this would not hold up any assembly line procedure.

WPB also pointed out it can still restrict models and types and also the materials which can be used. Since aluminum is more plentiful than other metals, for instance, a plant willing to use this material would get clearance easier than one insisting on copper or some of the scarcer plastics.

The complete list of items made subject to spot authorization procedure were: electric and gas domestic refrigerators, domestic washing machines, motorcycles, tank wagon bodies for motor trucks and trailers, electric wiring devices and heater cord sets, caskets, shipping cases ,burial vaults, toys and games, furniture and furniture parts, logging, lumber and wood products machinery and equipment, physical therapy equipment, lug gage, anti-friction bearings, light power driven tools, and amusement and gaming devices.

Cumberland Strike Reported Settled

Cumberland, Md. Nov. 21 (AP).—Operations at the Cumberland Steel plant were reported normal today after a week-long work stoppage which ended with settlement of a dispute between the company and 58 employes.

President Albert D. Harrison, representing Lodge 489, International Association of Machinists (AFL), said that the strike was settled "100 per cent in the union's favor." He said the dispute involved the company's failure to sign a new contract as ordered by the War Labor Board.

Company officials did not comment.

WMC Probe Asked Of Maryland Shipyard

Baltimore, Nov. 21 (AP).—The Maryland War Manpower Commission was requested today by a local union to investigate what was termed "instances of labor hoarding and poor utilization of workers" at the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co.'s Key Highway plant.

Local 24, Independent Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America (CIO), also asked investigation of the suspension of two men and the firing of a third as "the latest in a series of arbitrary dismissals and punishment" at the plant where a work stoppage is now in progress at the machine shop.

Western Maryland Again Has Snow

By the Associated Press

Snow fell again yesterday in western Maryland, with a few flurries in the central area, and only rain on the eastern shore.

The Sixth District headquarters of the State Roads Commission at Hagerstown reported the white flakes falling again yesterday in Garrett County, which had four inches of snow Monday.

There was none in Washington County yesterday, although half an inch fell Monday on Sibeling Hill Mountain, west of Hancock, and South Mountain, east of Hagerstown.

Just a chill drizzle fell on the eastern shore, and at times in Baltimore. The City of Baltimore experienced a few snow flurries.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Compromise Achieved On Air Traffic

FROM ALL INDICATIONS, meeting in Chicago have arrived at a workable compromise which will make possible the regulation of world air traffic and yet at the same time allow real competition for postwar air trade.

CHILDS

The plan agreed to is not so much a compromise as a synthesis of the proposals made by Britain, the United States and Canada. It represents concessions on the part of all three powers.

The international air organization which is to be created under the Chicago agreement will not have authority to allocate routes, as the British desired. In accord with American wishes, the way is to be left open for reciproeal agreements between one country and another.

This is a guarantee that American air lines can get started at once, taking advantage of superior American equipment and facilities. It will not be necessary to wait for other countries to catch up to the competitive position that we hold today.

Similarly, the British demand for quotas, which would have compelled United States lines to divide American passenger traffic with British lines, has been rejected. There will, apparently be no restrictions on the volume of mail and passengers to be carried by our air lines.

BUT WHY should we bother about the British and the Canadians, anyway? We've got the planes, the pilots, the skills. We can beat them to the gun by two or three years and grab most of the business.

That looks so easy that it may beguile some Americans. Actually, it isn't anything like as simple or as easy as that.

On the practical side, the far-flung British Commonwealth owns some highly strategic pieces of real estate in practically every section of the globe. If our air lines are to operate over global routes, we must have the right to use bases on those pieces of real estate. Air lines aren't possible without landing fields in the right places.

Then look at it another way. Without some kind of international organization we would have chaos in the air. The new organization will establish uniform landing signals, weather reports, radio beacons.

It will do more than that. It will prevent the kind of cut-throat competition which can undermine all technical safety regulations.

In short, it will mean the difference between order and anarchy. The agreement at Chicago didn't just happen. It came out of long and patient striving.

ACCORDING TO reports reaching here, a great deal of credit for the success of the conference goes to Assistant Secretary of State Adolf A. Berle, jr. Occasionally, during his six years in the State Department, it has seemed that Berle's phenomenal resources of knowledge were outweighed by a certain incapacity to deal with human beings. Now, however, in this difficult assignment requiring patience and tact, and with conflicting forces pulling so many different ways, he has proven his ability. With important negotiations still ahead in other fields, it is good to know we have such a skilful negotiator.

Not every one will accept the outcome at Chicago as a victory. Nothing less than the whole hog—completely untrammeled rights around the world—would have satisfied some air line interests, and they are powerful interests.

They will undoubtedly put up a fight, and particularly in Congress, since the Senate must eventually ratify the treaty that will implement the Chicago agreement. They should not be allowed to destroy or to undermine it.

It is another brick to go into the wall that must serve as a foundation for world peace. If we can get agreements on these long-standing sources of friction, then the world security organization will merely be ratification of what is already fact.

Drifting Boxcars Kill Contractor

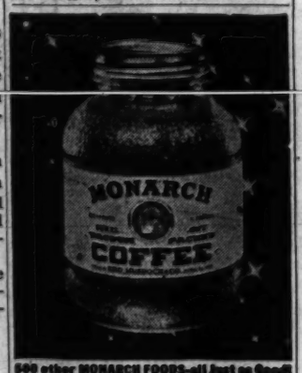

Texas, Md., Nov. 21 (AP).—Two drifting boxcars struck and killed Jacob Kemp Fowble, 38, of Timonium, contractor, yesterday at a quarry near Texas.

Towson police said Fowble was walking along the tracks where an engine had just disconnected two boxcars, allowing them to drift. The train's brakeman was taken into custody and later released to his employer, the Pennsylvania railroad, pending a hearing Saturday at Cockeysville.

Fowble is survived by his mother and two brothers. Funeral services will be held tomorrow.

British Public Favors Gradual Demobilizing of Fighting Men

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 21.—A survey among the British populace finds the vast majority of Britons in favor of a program of gradual demobilization after the war.

Three out of every four Britons would rather see men returned to civilian life as jobs are made available rather than have the men demobilized immediately and left to find jobs for themselves.

The issue was put to Britons by the affiliated British Institute of Public Opinion as follows:

"Should the Government demobilize men as soon as possible after the war and let them find jobs themselves, or should they be demobilized gradually as jobs are made available for them?"

A tabulation of replies:

Demobilize immediately and let them find own jobs	16%
Demobilize gradually as jobs are made available	76
No opinion	8

Although thinking in Britain on the subject may change when the war is over, the present restrained attitude has added significance when one considers that nearly every British family has a man in the services, and that the natural desire is to have him return home as soon as possible.

Although the problem of demobilization for United States military was made an issue during the recent presidential campaign, with emphasis on the fact that "our boys" will be returned speedily after the war, demobilization will actually be one of the most critical problems facing the Nation's economy in the early post-war period.

The American public in a suvey taken during 1943 expected that men in the armed forces would have trouble finding jobs when they returned from the war, and a preponderance of them favored keeping men in the services until peace-time jobs were available for them.

To avoid costly 4th War Winter car troubles
Your Engine needs tuning for cold weather driving, for easy starting, to avoid stalling, and to compensate for low octane wartime gas. It needs lighter oil, too.
Your Electrical System Battery should be tested and recharged if necessary for cold weather starting. Also clean and tighten cable connections.
Your Cooling System needs flushing. All hose connections should be checked to prevent leaks. Replace hose if necessary. Add anti-freeze.
Your Braking System Adjust brakes so they function equally — for safety, and to save on tire wear. Reline if necessary. Check stop light operation.

'Rebecca' at National Theater Has Quality of Grim Appeal

By Nelson B. Bell

"REBECCA." Victor Payne-Jennings presents Daphne Du Maurier's dramatization of her best-selling novel, in three acts and six scenes. Directed by Clarence Derwent; setting by Watson Barratt. At the National Theater.

IN HER DRAMATIZATION of her own novel of "Rebecca," which last night opened a two-week engagement on the stage of the National Theater, Daphne Du Maurier has embodied all of the essential drama that gave power and emotional impact to the book and, in 1940, in film form, won the Academy Award for Producer David O. Selznick as the best picture of the year.

The story of the 21-year-old bride who comes to the fabulous castle of Manderley on the Coast of Cornwall, in England, as the successor of the first Mrs. Maxim de Winter, who had left an indelible imprint not only upon her husband, but upon the whole countryside, is at base a pretty morbid examination of the more sordid things in human relationships.

The strength lies in the seemingly one-sided conflict between the timid and frightened young wife and the manifold forces that conspire to convince her that there can be no second Mrs. de Winter worthy of the name. The narrative unfolded on the stage, just as it was on the screen, is an epic of exquisite and subtle torment and persecution.

Weighted With Woe

Everything the second Mrs. de Winter does, or attempts to do, is utterly and completely wrong in the eyes of those who had participated in a close association with the first wife of the harassed master of Manderley.

The butler is still under the spell of the first chatelaine of the sprawling estate; the housekeeper, Mrs. Danvers, perpetuates an unswerving devotion to her first mistress; Frank Frawley, general factotum of the house and acreage, is still under the pall and one or two characters who had indulged a dubious intimacy with the first Mrs. de Winter, who never appears in the play except by name, add to the mental confusion and emotional disturbance of the girl who is forced into the hopeless position of trying to take her place.

That she finally does is the development of the three acts and six scenes that lays the drama open to its most serious criticism.

There could be a considerable quibble with the fundamental integrity of a play that vindicates a self-acknowledged murderer upon the seemingly conclusive basis of circumstantial evidence. Maxim de Winter was an exceedingly lucky fellow, even in the face of the transgressions and all the delinquencies of a first wife he hated with an intensity that became almost as great an obsession as an overwhelming love.

Slighty Anti-Social

I am afraid that "Rebecca," in the large view, is on the wrong side of the social argument. It is, nevertheless, an arresting and tensely gripping study of a domestic situation that it would be the charitable thing not to wish upon even one's bitterest and most malignant enemy.

Nonetheless, under the productional guidance of Victor Payne-Jennings, the piece takes on considerable dramatic stature by virture of the skill with which it is enacted and the impression of opulence that has been imparted to the goings-on by the handsome single set provided in one of his more helpful moods by Watson Barratt.

The three stellar roles are judiciously intrusted to Diana Barrymore, as the bride who has to fight her way to recognition at Manderley; Bramwell Fletcher, as Maxim de Winter, and Florence Reed, as the poisonous, resentful and thoroughly vindictive and vicious Mrs. Danvers.

Miss Barrymore's most effective scenes are the early ones in which she is the bewildered and ingenuous new mistress of the castle, unaware of all the evil days that lie before her. In the later and more emotional—or they should be—intervals of the action, this able young actress in an illustrious line, seemed to me, last night, to fall a shade short of all that might have been derived from some of her scenes. In spite of this, there is upon her the deep stamp of her tremendous inheritance in the theater.

Advantageously Cast

Mr. Fletcher's Maxim de Winter is a well-wrought and strongly limned portrait of a man with burdens he does not choose to reveal before the final periods of the action. Aside from the doubtful implications of his role—Miss Du Maurier's fault, not his—I could find nothing in his performance last evening to inspire anathemas.

There could hardly have been a more appropriate assignment to the role of Mrs. Danvers than Florence Reed. I cannot recall when Miss Reed ever has been cast in a pleasant or sympathetic part, or has failed to bring distinction to any character she has played, whatever its nature.

The stellar triumvirate never is let down by its supporting cast. Margaret Bannerman and Franklyn Fox, as Maj. and Mrs. Giles Lacy; Claude Horton as Crawley; Richard Temple, in the more than usually important role of the butler, Frith; George Baxter, as the unconscionable cad, Jack Favell, and Reginald Mason, the Colonel Julyan, all contribute notably to an exceptionally well-balanced ensemble—with particular emphasis on Miss Bannerman and Mr. Mason.

All of which, of course, is flagrantly redundant, since "Rebecca" is sold out for its two weeks on E st., save for a few seats for the matinees.

Last night's curtain calls were enough to explain that.

Nurse Killed as She Salutes Courage of American Boys

By Ruth Cowan

A U. S. Army Hospital, Somewhere in Belgium, Nov. 21 (AP).—It was nearly 2 o'clock in the morning, but Lieut. Frances Slanger, a graduate of the Boston (Mass.) City Hospital, could not sleep.

Carefully she eased out of her cot so as not to disturb her tentmates, and by flashlight she began writing down some of the things about American doughboys they had been discussing earlier in the night.

Their conversation had been prompted by a story in which the GIs praised the nurses for "roughing it."

"We have learned a great deal about our American soldier and the stuff he is made of," she wrote. "The wounded do not cry. Their buddies come first. The patience and determination they show, the courage and fortitude they have is something always to behold."

The next morning she read it to her tenmates—Lieut. Elizabeth Powers of Lowell, Mass., chief nurse of the hospital platoon; Lieut. Christine Cox, Prides Crossing, Mass., and Lieut. Margaret Bowler, Westfield, Mass.—and said she was thinking of sending it to Stars and Stripes.

They encouraged her and signed it with her. That morning—October 21—she mailed it.

The Paris edition of the Stars and Stripes published the letter November 7 under the title "Nurse Writes Editorial."

But the soldier editor did not know at that time that Nurse Slanger was killed by a German shell the day she mailed the letter and had been buried in the mud in a military cemetery — the first American Army nurse in the European war theater to die from enemy action.

And at the head of her grave they put the Star of David.

When the shell burst in their area—the third during a 45-minute barrage — Lieutenant Bowler had been writing a letter, Lieutenant Powers was tying up Christmas presents and Lieutenant Slanger was sitting on the cot beside her.

Lieutenant Slanger was struck in the abdomen by a fragment. The other two nurses were slightly wounded.

Lieutenant Slanger and her tentmates had waded ashore on a Normandy beachhead on D-day plus four. Two hours later, despite their wet clothes, they were on duty in a field hospital set up at St. Mere Eglise, where the fighting was heavy.

LEONARD LYONS

Broadway Potpourri

New York, Nov. 21.—Col. Elliott Roosevelt escorted his sister, Mrs. Anna Boettiger, to the Stork Club. They saw Cliff Edwards, and Col. Roosevelt admired the singer's gay-colored tie. "If I thought you could use it, I'd give it to you," said Edwards. . . . "I can use it," said Roosevelt, and Edwards gave it to him. . . . Col. Roosevelt will wear the tie within the next few days, when he flies to California for a reunion with his children. It's been years since they saw him, and he wants them to see him again as they remember him—in civilian clothes. "The regulations allow a uniformed man to wear civilian clothes where there are no more than three people present," he stated. "And I'm going to spend my leave just with the children."

CLIFF EDWARDS

When Colonel Roosevelt flew overseas, just before the invasion of Africa, his plane was christened "Jingle, Jangle." All the other planes in his squadron were named after the Frank Loesser song hit of that time. One was called "I Got Spurs," another "Oh, Lillie Belle," etc. To each member of this "Jingle, Jangle" squadron, Colonel Roosevelt gave a pair of Western riding boots and spurs, which they wore in flight. . . . Colonel Roosevelt flew his "Jingle, Jangle" for two years, through each invasion of Europe and Africa. Before he came back here, his plane finally was junked. But he still has the spurs he wore. And Colonel Roosevelt brought them home, to present to Pvt. Frank Loesser, as a memento of the good fortune the song brought to them both.

George Jessel, now a high-salaried Hollywood producer, was discussing the other reason for his abandoning Broadway. The first reason of course, was the $2500-a-week, 52-weeks-a-year salary . . . "My last show on Broadway didn't make money on account of the FBI," Jessel explained. "J. Edgar Hoover is a friend of mine, and he has the greatest law-enforcement agency in the world. But my show closed because of an FBI mistake. One night Himmler and Goebbels sent five spies to America, by submarine. They managed to slip into the country and evade the G-men. And they happened to arrive on the night my show opened—in time to write the reviews."

The movie which Beatrice Lillie made in England, "On Approval," arrived here last week. It will be released in N. Y. coincident with Miss Lillie's appearance in "The Seven Lively Arts" . . . Molnar's new novel will be called "Farewell, My Heart" . . . Jack Carson will co-star with Eddie Bracken in the Warner Bros. remake of "Three Men on a Horse" . . . The OWI presented to Joseph Szigeti a violin concerto found at Maidaneck concentration camp near Lublin, Poland, on August 27, by John Evans of Reuter's. The composer is Ernest J. Weil, who undoubtedly was killed at the camp. His sonata was sent here by microfilm.

Dixie Tighe, the war correspondent, lectured in Wilkes-Barre last week. Miss Tighe, recently returned from England, discussed Pennsylvania's naval hero, whom she had met in London, Admiral Stark. After the lecture an 80-year-old lady, who spends every Wednesday selling War Bonds in an unheated booth in Wilkes-Barre, and who received a letter from her nephew, Admiral Stark, approached Miss Tighe and said: "He may be Admiral to you, but to me he's always 'my blue-eyed baby.'"

There'll be a preview of Alfred Hitchcock's "Spellbound" for every prominent detective and mystery writer. During the screening the picture will be stopped and the crime experts will be asked to solve the mystery . . . Harold Ickes who chided the newspapers for their lack of influence, citing the election results, has written a Collier's article attacking the newspapers for being responsible for the demise of the ew Deal's proposed Arabian pipeline . . . When the lights went out at the Iridium Room it was LeRoy, of Estelle and LeRoy, who fixed them. The dancer just finished two years as a Sperry Gyroscope laborer.

When Capt. Charles Lederer, the screenwriter-director, made an OCS training film, the commandant warned him: "I don't want that girl with the hair over one eye in it" . . . "If you mean Veronica Lake, sir," said Lederer, "there'll be no girls in this at all. This is an Army training film" . . . "Anyhow, I don't like her," said the commandant . . . One of the scenes showed the soldiers leaping from the stairway. A sergeant refused to let these soldiers return for closeup shots, suggesting that Lederer use other soldiers for closeups. Lederer went to the commandant, who shrugged: "But one soldier's as good as another for closeups" . . . "Look, sir," said Lederer. "If we take a picture of William Powell leaping, we can't use a closeup of another actor completing the leap" . . . "William Powell? I like him," said the commandant. "Have it your way."

Amazing results shown in improving the Looks... boosting VITALITY!

Improper diet, overwork, undue worries, colds, the flu or other illness often impairs the stomach's digestive functions and reduces the red-blood strength.
A person who is operating on only a 10 to 75% healthy blood volume or a stomach digestive capacity of only 50 to 60% normal is severely handicapped.
At such times Nature needs extra help to restore its balance and function properly. Undigested food places a tax on the system...insufficient blood strength is a detriment to good health.
If you are subject to poor digestion or suspect deficient red-blood as the cause of your trouble, yet have no organic complication or focal infection, SSS Tonic may be just what you need!
SSS Tonic is especially designed (1) to promote the flow of VITAL DIGESTIVE JUICES in the stomach and (2) to build-up BLOOD STRENGTH when deficient.
These two important results enable you to enjoy the food you do eat . . . to make use of it as Nature intended. Thus you may get new vitality . . . pep . . . become animated . . . more attractive!

ir Tax Study 'romises End F Duplication

By James V. Piersol
Post Aviation Editor

he Advisory Committee on avi- n taxes concluded its two-day eting here late yesterday after- n with a majority advocating ablishment of a joint Federal- te agency to allocate among the tes the kind and amount of es each may levy and thus elim- te the many duplicating assess- nts now imposed on interstate commerce.

nder the plan proposed by the nomists and state tax officials fered from all sections of the ion, the new agency would es- ted but never, so far as is known, lish a precedent long contem- into effect. Regardless of ether it is finally called a tax up, board, arbitrator—or by any er name—the new organization uld act as a referee among the flicting agencies tending to trim tree of air commerce when it ust beginning to grow.

When put into definite recom- ndations to Congress by the l Aeronautics Board, as Con- ss and the President have di- ed be done on or before De- ber 31, the findings of the mittee will have the makings a new tax law with potentiali- as reaching far beyond avia- itself.

ion Will Set Precedent

At Last," said Oswald Ryan, rd member and chairman of the mittee, "the tax study and tever action finally is taken, establish a precedent that can followed by power companies, roads and other interstate car- s long perplexed and hindered he tax question."

uel taxes, property, revenue all other forms of multiple s are involved. The long dor- t problems involved were ight to life by a recent decision he Supreme Court upholding right of a State, in substance, ax everything and everybody g over its territory. One air- company found itself paying s in six different states on the e property—airplanes.

ver vigilant and "tender on subject of States' rights," as State official put it, the State experts made it clear they did come to Washington to sur- ler their rights; nor did they e entirely among themselves. they were unanimous on two ts:

rst, they all agreed that taxes l dnot be allowed to erect a ier to interstate flying.

t Directed Consultation

econd, they all agreed "this is first time Congress has by law ifically directed a Government cy (the CAB) to consult with States before taking action."

asis of the first point of unan- y appeared rooted in a belief flying machines might be ended from the "goose that the golden egg."

redit for the second point of ement appeared to belong to Representative Alfred L. Bulwinkle (D., N. C.), who drew up and introduced the bill directing the tax study and recommendations.

The consensus of State officials was expressed by George Watson, director of the State Federation of Tax Administrators, of Chicago.

Allocation Plan Is Liked

"The majority of States prefer to collect their own taxes," Watson said. "But they have no objection to a Federal-State board set up to apportion the amount each may collect to avoid duplication and multiplicity of taxes. The idea of a central allocating authority is one of the most promising that's come along."

A similar view was expressed by others including Dixwell Pierce, secretary of California's State Board of Equalization.

One exception to the idea of having the joint Federal-State agency allocate while the States do their own collecting was the fuel tax. The majority favored having the Federal Government collect the gasoline tax and to make it uniform throughout the United States. At present the gasoline tax ranges from zero up to 7 cents a gallon, as in the case of Tennessee.

Meat Slaughter Drops Sharply From '43 Rate

Although meat production is picking up gradually—and seasonally—the amount going through federally inspected plants last week was almost 100 million pounds less than a year ago, the War Meat Board estimated yesterday.

Total output for the week was placed at 366 million pounds, compared to 434 million pounds for the same week in 1943.

Some of the decline—which is points to civilians—is due to the expected to bring higher ration lighter weight of animals being marketed, but most of it can be traced to the fact that fewer animals are coming to market since the feed supply situation has improved so markedly.

Hogs slaughtered during the week totaled 1,292,000 head, or 25 per cent fewer than a year ago. Cattle slaughter was down to 11,000 head. The pork decrease was anticipated because the spring pig crop was reduced, but the War Food Administration had looked forward to a "cattle slaughter boom" as soon as range pastures gave out.

"Sheep slaughter has been running 15 to 20 per cent under a year ago since last July," the meat board reported.

Veal production was up, however, with 28 millio pounds reported for the week in comparison to 19 million pounds a year ago.

That cattle have not been rushed to market in the record numbers anticipated by WFA, in view of the tremendous numbers on the ranges, is said to result from the plentiful supply of grain, the hope of cattle raisers that prices will be adjusted upward, and also the delay of V-E Day.

As loong as the war continues full blast and feed is plentiful, cattlemen can continue to gamble on higher prices eventualy. Aso, lighter weight animals that put so much utility grade beef on the market earlier this fall "proved a satisfaction to no one," and the trend now is toward better beef.

39,644 Aliens Flown To U. S. Include 2489 Under Axis

A total of 39,664 aliens, including 2489 from Axis or Axis-dominated countries, entered the United States by air from July 1, 1943, to May 30, 194.

The House Immigration and Naturalization Committee made public this information yesterday in disclosing receipt of a letter from Attorney General Francis Biddle in response to a resolution by Representative Clare E. Hoffman (R., Mich.), asking the number of "refugees and of what nationality and from what countries" who have entered by air since June, 1943.

Biddle wrote Representative Samuel Dickstein, (D., N. Y.), the committee chairman, that of the 7997 who entered this country at La Guardia Field, 313 were from Axis or Axis-dominated nations. Only 12 were allowed to remain in the United States.

The remainder of the aliens, 32,-167, arrived at Miami, and of these 2176 were from Axis or Axis-dominated countries. Six hupndred eighty-six of them were granted permanent residence, according to Attorney General Biddle.

The committee yesterday reported out the Hoffman resolution with the recommendation that it be voed down.

Catholic Diocese Bans Hymns Used As Popular Songs

Pittsburgh, Nov. 20 (AP).—Bishop Hugh C. Boyle of the Pittsburgh Catholic diocese has forbidden the use of Catholic radio programs originating in the diocese of hymns whose music he says has been changed until it "is no longer suited to the words."

On the forbidden list announced by Bishop Boyle are all of the sodality hymns by Daniel A. Lord, Mozart's "Ave Verum," Nevin's "My Rosary," and the romantic "Ave Maries" by Schubert, Gounod, Luzzi, Millard and Rosewig. The hymn, "Mary Help Our Valiant Soldiers," is also on the list.

Commenting on the ban, the Rev. Charles Rossini, chairman of the Diocesan Music Commission, said:

"When people are at worship and the soft strains of one of the sacred hymns are played, it recalls to mind that the same music had been heard elsewhere, at an opera, in a movie theater, or on the radio played by some swing band. Immediately thoughts of those at prayer were diverted to some place outstide of the church."

War Undersecretary Continuance Approved

Legislation continuing the position of Undersecretary of War until six months after hostilities end was approved yesterday by the House Military Committee. The office will expire December 31 unless Congress acts.

Perfect Defense Research, Patterson Urges

The fury with which future aggressors will strike makes it mandatory to perfect a national defense research program, Undersecretary of War Patterson declared yesterday.

"I cannot put too much stress o nthe importance of scientific research and development as a strong bulwark in our long-range national defense," Patterson told the House Committee on Postwar Military Policy. The committee is studying the subject of military research.

"An aggressor in the future will strike even faster than in the past and with ten-fold fury," he said. "The weapons—rockets, jet-propelled bombs, guided missiles, to mention only a few—that are the actualities of today are incontrovertible evidence of this fact."

Saying such weapons "are still in their infancy," Patterson added that never since the invention of gunpowder has the obsolescence of military weapons been "as swift as at the present time."

The War Department, he told the committee, favors creation of an Army-Navy board under the organization of the National Academy of Sciences and including the chairman of the National Advisory Committee of Aeronautics. Establishment by Congress of an independent research agency, he said, "might introduce additional difficulties which would not be offset by its advantages.

Patterson said he did not want to see an armaments race after this war, but added that he believes a lasting peace will be more certain if "backed up by military strength."

Asked by Representative Cole (R., N. Y.) if he believed the United Nations would find it mutually advantageous to exchange research and development ideas, Patterson replied without elaboration:

"I'm not sure."

TWO QUESTIONS TO ASK IN CHOOSING A RUM

1 Is it an old, established brand? For your information, Government House Rum has been recognized as one of the great rums imported from the Caribbean since long before the war.

2 Is it produced especially for rum drinks? Government House Rum is famous for its fine delicate flavor—the essential quality for a successful Daiquiri, Rum Collins and other rum drinks.

Your dealer has plenty of Government House Rum. Insist on it.

Harvester Firm Puts 2 Million Into 6th Loan

The Capital's Sixth War Loan drive advanced briskly yesterday, the second day of the campaign, with a respresentative of the International Harvester Company purchasing $2,050,000 worth of assorted bonds available to corporations.

Sales of bonds in offices, stores, theaters and homes of the Capital have not been announced, but the company's purchase and the 3 million dollars worth bought by the audience at Monday night's opening bond rally at Constitution Hall boosted known sales to more than 5 million dollars.

The company's check was presented to Thomas Groom, chairman of the banking division of the District War Finance Committee, by Robert M. Eaves, assistant to the vice president of the International Harvester Company.

Local goal of the war bond drive is 94 million dollars and the national goal is 14 billion. Reports streaming in from over the nation disclosed many cities had reached their quotas by the second day, due to considerable preliminary solicitation, and that the nation generally is responding generously.

Edward N. Scheiberlin, national commander of the American Legion, reminded the Nation yesterday in a special war bond statement that even after the war is won, there will be tremendous expense in caring for the fighting men until they can be returned to their homes.

He urged Americans to "buy to the limit of your ability and increase that ability if possible," adding "no American ought to let down on the home front while servicemen had laid aside their own plans and ambitions to fight and die for their country."

The following war bond events are scheduled here today:

Woodward & Lothrop employes' gathering, 14th and F sts. nw., 8:4. a. m. John A. Reilly of the District War Finance executive committee, will speak.

Capital Transit Co., Maine ave. and P sts. sw., 3 p. m. Marine Pvt. Edward W. Glad, holder of the Navy Cross, will speak.

Benjamin Franklin Lodge, No. 50, FAAM, Shorehame Hotel, 9 p. m., war bond dance. Speech by Samuel Levine, war bond chairman of the organization.

Brightwood No. 3, Masonic Lodge, 9:30 p. m., John T. Vivian, war bond chairman of Grand Lodge, will present Treasury citations for sustained bond-selling activities to the lodge and to Nathan C. Robinson, lodge war bond chairman.

Palmdale, Calif., Nov. 20 (U.P.).—Posses searched the desert near here today for 4-year-old Neil C. Allen, missing since late yesterday when he disobeyed his parents and wandered away from their parked car on a family outing.

Parties of sheriff's deputies, county foresters and Palmdale residents, realizing he could not live long in that area, spread the hunt over miles of waste lands during the night as temperatures lowered dangerously.

Two GIs Find House Seats 'Beat Reveille'

By the Associated Press

Two GIs on leave yesterday tested out the House seats they will occupy in January, shook hands with Speaker Sam Rayburn and opined:

"This beats reveille at dawn."

The words were those of Pvt. William J. Green, 34, father of four, elected to the House from Philadelphia. The setniments were echoed by Sergt. Melvin Price, 39-year-old bachelor, elected from East St. Louis, Ill.

"That reveille . . . that was the toughest," said Price.

Neither is quite through with the bugle despite their election. Green has to be back at Camp Lee, Va., this weekend. Price is on a three-day pass from the same cantonment.

As soon as the vote is certified, each will doff his uniform and enter Congress in January.

Price formerly was secretary to an Illinois Representative and had 10 years' experience on Capitol Hill. Green was in politics in Philadelphia and was an employe in the Governor's personnel office in Harrisburg, Pa., from 1935 to 1939.

Chicago Sun Terms Power of AP Unequaled

By the Associated Press

The Chicago Sun told the Supreme Court yesterday that "unparalleled resources and qualities" have made the Associated Press "the greatest of all American news agencies."

Intervening as a friend of the court in support of the Government's antitrust law action against the nonprofit news cooperative, the newspaper said:

"The combination of so great a majority of the American newspapers pooling their individual and their collective news-gathering facilities creates a news gathering organization with an actual and potential power that cannot be equaled. No other American news agency has or, while the exclusive features exist, can have comparable facilities and resources."

The case is before the court on appeal from the decision of a three-judge special court in the southern district of New York restraining the AP from observing by-laws which permit members to consider the competitive effect of an application for membership.

Alexandria War Loan Drive Off to Enthusiastic Start

Opening the Sixth War Loan in Alexandria Monday night, $25,000 worth of war bonds were sold at a rally sponsored by the Congregation Agudas Achim for the Jewish Community at the synagogue building at 508 Wolfe st.

Guest speakers at the ceremony conducted by Rabbi Philip N. Ritholtz included the wife of Alexandria's ranking service resident, Mrs. Carl A. Spaatz of 206 Duke st., whose husband, Lieutenant General Spaatz, is in command of the United States Strategic Air Force in western Europe; and two men back from overseas, Tech. Sergt. Irving Schlossenberg, USMC, former Washington Post photographer, recently returned from 26 months' service in the South Pacific, and Sergt. Paul C. Lifset, USA, now stationed at Fort Belvoir after two and a half years of service in the Pacific theater.

William T. Coe, general chairman of the Sixth War Loan in Alexandria, in outlining the campaign to stress E bond sales in the drive for the $2,158,000 city quota, announced the appointment of Mrs. Dan E. Kerbel of 23 Glendale ave. as chairman of bond sales for the entire Jewish community of Alexandria. Highlighting the rally program was the presentation of both the national colors and the Jewish flag by a color guard of soldiers from Fort Belvoir.

A committee of women in the congregation conducted the bond sales including: Mrs. Ethel Abramson, Mrs. Shirley Hayman, Mrs. Nora Woolf, Mrs. Sylvia Bregman and Mrs. Kerbel who had arranged the rally. The congregation raised $80,000 in the Fourth War Loan for the highest total of any organization, which was topped only by receipts entered by the banks of Alexandria.

'War Guilt' Complex Tried on Allied Fliers

New York, Nov. 20 (AP).—Brigadier John Rawlings Rees, consulting psychiatrist to the British army, said today that German propaganda minister Goebbels had succeeded in implanting a "war guilt" complex in the minds of some Allied airmen.

The technique used, Rees told a press conference, was to take the men on conducted tours of bombed German cities with the idea of "stirring up a guilt complex in them." Rees said he found from interviews with repatriated airmen that the technique had been effective in many cases.

Better Taxi Service

The public continues to complain about the taxi service; about the difficulty of obtaining taxis, that many of the drivers are surly or bullying, that overcharging is prevalent, that drivers refuse to go to outlying districts, or to stop when signaled. It seems to us that the fault lies as much in the system as in the drivers themselves.

To begin with, about two-fifths of the drivers are in a privileged position. They have formed a company which owns particular concessions, including the right to wait for passengers at that very important site, the Union Station. Whatever the legality of this may be in peacetime (and we have raised the question before), it certainly is in question in a period of wartime shortages. It is unreasonable to expect a driver not included in the concession to go with a good will to the Union Station, which is a long way from the heart of the city, when he is obliged to come back empty. A similar situation is faced by the driver who takes a fare to the Shoreham and the Wardman Park Hotels, where there also are concessions.

A second point where improvement is possible is in the absurd and quite anti-economic provision whereby the fare charged a single passenger is at once reduced if another person enters the cab. Let us see how this works out: A takes a cab downtown and asks to be driven to the Walter Reed Hospital. Fare: 90 cents. For a drive of some 5 miles, and presumably another 5 miles back empty, this is no paying proposition, but it becomes merely a generous gesture on the part of the driver if another passenger is picked up. Suppose passenger B hails the same cab and asks to go to, let us say, the Statler. B pays for this service 20 cents, and A, instead of 90 cents, pays only 50 cents. Net result: for more work, less pay, 70 cents in all. This situation needs no comment. We think that the reduced fare should only be applied to the case of passengers getting in the cab at the same place. The only possible exception to this might be in the morning rush hour from 8 to 9.

A better understanding is also needed with the authorities of surrounding districts. District drivers have frequently been arrested for "loitering to pick up passengers" in suburban areas in Maryland or Virginia. Accordingly drivers are free to refuse would-be passengers who wish to go over the District line, say to Arlington, though Arlington is almost as much a part of the District as any other zone. Withal there are grounds, in our experience, for the complaint about discourtesy, though the cases are not as frequent as is sometimes made out.

Westwall

Although spectacular and heartening, the French First Army's breakthrough in the Belfort sector and its arrival on the Rhine at the point near the meeting of the boundaries of France, Switzerland and Germany is of greater psychological than strategic significance. In that region the German Westwall lies to the east of the Rhine, and it is the Westwall that must be broken through or flanked before the final Battle of Germany can be fought. In that respect, therefore, what is happening far to the north—in the Venlo and Geilenkirchen-Eschweiler sectors—is of prime importance. A breakthrough in that region would bring the Allies to Cologne and Duesseldorf and practically within artillery range of the Ruhr. It would also force a German withdrawal to the Rhine and beyond, and it is questionable whether, given the very mixed units that now make up the German defensive force in the west, the German army is capable at this juncture of fighting a war of movement.

As long as the bulk of the German forces in the west are operating from fixed defenses, the so-called Volksgrenadiere, which consist of individuals recently mustered into the Wehrmacht, can still serve a useful military purpose. But they lack the training, the stamina and the equipment for a fight in the open. Realizing this, the opposition which the Allies have encountered in the north has been very much fiercer than the opposition met in the Metz and Belfort sectors, and this gives the impression that the bulk of the best German troops are now concentrated in the north.

More than ever the German problem is how to spread a diminishing force along a vast front without leaving the line too thinly defended at any vital point to prevent an Allied breakthrough. This problem becomes increasingly difficult for the enemy as Allied power increases and their own diminishes. Not only are the Germans outnumbered by possibly as much as three to one; the fire power which the Allies are in a position to employ against Maginot and Westwall defenses is mounting as a result of such developments as the freeing of the port of Antwerp.

It is in this contest that we must read the earnest plea of General Eisenhower to the home front to devote the very maximum of effort from now until the day of German surrender. The opportunity to deal a smashing blow to the Wehrmacht now presents itself. Nothing must be left undone to make full use of that opportunity and in consequence greatly to shorten the war.

Treaty Or Agreement?

Today the Senate begins its latest wrestling match with the enigma: when is a treaty not a treaty. We suspect that the contest will be watched with interest everywhere. The final outcome is almost certain to have an important bearing upon the peace of the world, for treaty-making is the device that controls our relations to the international community of which we are a part. For even though the Dumbarton Oaks proposal will go to the Senate in treaty form, the substance of our cooperation with other powers may be determined by the handling of many related agreements in Congress.

We hope, therefore, that the Senate Commerce Subcommittee will probe to the bottom of this issue. The immediate problem before it is whether the St. Lawrence waterway proposal shall be approved as a treaty requiring a two-thirds vote in the Senate or an executive agreement. If it is found to be an executive agreement, it can be made effective by majority votes in the House and Senate. We doubt that the Commerce Committee is the best equipped body to make this study. It is likely to be prejudiced on one side of the issue, just as the Foreign Relations Committee would doubtless be prejudiced on the other. In the interest of an impartial study the issue might well have gone to the Judiciary Committee. But in any event the hearing should ultimately lead to submission of the controversy to the Senate.

Ordinarily an agreement of this importance would undoubtedly be regarded as a treaty. President Roosevelt took that view when he submitted a proposed St. Lawrence treaty to the Senate in 1934. Some years after the Senate had rejected it by a minority vote (46 yeas, 42 nays) the President submitted it again in the form of an executive agreement, and now he says that he is indifferent to the form used so long as authorization for construction of the waterway is forthcoming. Congress would not encroach upon the treaty-making process any further than it has done in several previous cases if it should merely legislate in support of the "executive agreement."

We do not think, however, that this problem can be dismissed by saying that in some instances there are ways of getting around the treaty-making provision of the Constitution. For a nation as mature as is the United States it is patently absurd to have Congress entangled in repeated rows over what procedure shall be used to implement our understandings with other nations. We further make ourselves ridiculous by solemnly pronouncing a major oil compact a treaty and a major navigation-power project an executive agreement. The obvious remedy is not to draw a nonexistent line between agreements of this type but to amend the Constitution so that all of them can be ratified with the advice and consent of a majority in both houses of Congress. We cannot help thinking that if the current study is thorough-going and realistic it will point in this direction.

Pangs of Conscience

When the Army finds a man physically unfit for military service, it sends him back to civilian life with the hope that his abilities will make a contribution to the war effort. When it finds a man psychologically unfit for military service, it does the same thing. But when it finds a man conscientiously unfit—that is unable to render military service because of conscientious scruples—it treats him in quite different fashion. It packs him off to something called a Civilian Public Service Camp and assigns him to something called "work of national importance" without taking any account whatever of his ability to render more useful service in some other sphere.

Consider the case of Don Charles DeVault by way of illustration. When this country entered the war, Dr. DeVault was engaged in teaching and research in physical chemistry at Stanford University in California. He had earned his Ph. D. at the University of California the preceding year. By order of his local Selective Service Board, he was classified II-A and given a six-month deferment on occupational grounds, although he had asked to be classified IV-E as a conscientious objector, as, on his record and his beliefs, he was. Later he was deferred again, this time in class II-B, indicating that his work at the university was considered essential to the war effort.

The following year, however, a Government appeal agent challenged his classification, and the appeal board placed him in 1-A-O for noncombat service. He refused induction into the Army, was arrested, tried and sentenced to 18 months in the Federal Penitentiary at McNeil Island. When he had served half this term, he was paroled, reclassified IV-E (which was what he had requested originally) and sent to the Civilian Public Service labor camp at Mancos, Colo. There from 7:30 in the morning to 5 in the afternoon, he dug ditches, picked up rocks and drove trucks. But in his leisure time he teamed up with another chemist in the camp and began research into the molds from which penicillin is produced. To carry on this research work more effectively he asked for detached service. "As I work with a shovel or lean on it or drive a truck during the 51 hours per week that I am prevented from being useful in any way comparable to what I can do or to the world situation," he wrote, "I cannot help but worry about the problem. It is not that we object to making sacrifices, because we do not. It is the uselessness of the particular sacrifices that the authorities designate for us."

The sole outcome of this plea was an order transferring him to the Government camp at Germfask in northern Michigan where rebellious or "noncooperative" objectors are concentrated. There he began again his penicillin research. He gave up his furlough time to carry it on. He purchased equipment out of the $5 monthly allowance granted to him by Selective Service. When his experiments had reached what seemed to him a fruitful stage and when his parole period had expired, he appealed again for detached service. He was refused. In turn, he refused to report for the regular camp assignments. "Henceforth," he declared, "I shall be reporting for work on penicillin or related subjects." He has been arrested and is now awaiting another sentence to priso...

If there is any sense in this wasting of a man's skill, we cannot see it. If there is any justice in this punishment of a man because of his conscience, it is beyond our discernment. We say that this is stupid and ugly—and unbecoming to a great free people engaged in a war for the freedom of the human conscience.

Palestinian Terror

Leaders of the various Zionist organizations affiliated with the Jewish Agency have echoed Mr. Churchill's condemnation of the terrorists in Palestine responsible for the assassination in Cairo of Lord Moyne, Britain's Resident Minister in the Middle East. The crime, indeed, was more than shameful. It was a threat to the negotiations which are now being conducted by Palestine Jewry with the British authorities. These negotiations had as their object the revision of the policy of the White Paper under which immigration into Palestine was to be suspended. The way to force the pace is certainly not by assassination. That is the way to arrest it, as Mr. Churchill declared, and official Zionists throughout the world, who know that Mr. Churchill is no friend of the White Paper, have taken up his call upon them to root out the terrorism in Palestine which is casting a shadow over the Zionist cause.

The terrorists stem originally from the New Zionists, or revisionists, who organized themselves some years ago under the late Vladimir Jabotinsky. They split from the official organizations because of a disagreement over tactics in combating the hostility and terrorism of the Arabs, whose violent activities, it should not be forgotten, forced the policy of the White Paper upon the British. Official Zionists, who did not believe in retaliation against the Arabs, formed quasi-military groups for purposes of self-defense. Jabotinsky's group, however, set up the Irgun Zvai Leumi, or National Military Organization, which had an offensive purpose. Before long the Irgun, having developed a taste for lawlessness, went too far even for the New Zionists, and became independent. Violence seemed to breed more violence, and in time a split occurred in the Irgun. The extremists, who believed in assassination, broke away under the Polish Abraham Stern, and became known as Sternists. From the ranks of these Sternists came the assassins who killed Lord Moyne and his chauffeur.

The alarm over these outbreaks has been voiced in London by Dr. Chaim Weizmann, president of the World Zionist Organization, and in New York by Rabbi Silver, co-chairman of the American Zionist Emergency Council. Both of them avow the determination of Palestine Jewry to crush the terror in its midst. The world will watch with sympathy the working out of this self-cleansing process, for it is plain that the terrorists have become fanatics in the Santayana sense; i. e., young men who have redoubled their efforts as they have lost their aim. The aim remains the establishment of a Jewish commonwealth in Palestine, with the doors opened to the homeless Jews from martyred Europe. The terrorists are doing their best to prevent its fulfillment.

WHEELING OF THE YEAR

The long blue arrows of the wind,
(Narrow as sound beneath the door),
Go slicing through the shaggy green
Of hemlock boughs; the sun has thinned
From gold to yellow . . . there is more
Of sparkle, yet the aisles between

The flower-garden stalks are wide;
Belated bees are struck with sloth,
Their wings close-furled until the noon,
When, warmed to action, they collide
By steering sideways.
Fading cloth
Of Queen-Anne's-Lace and grass, will soon

Be trampled by November gales,
And bend beneath the pressing rain;
The cattle, summered in the far
Hill-pastures, step through lowered rails
And then are herded home again,
Where milking stools and mangers are.

Patriotic Soliloquy

By Malvina Lindsay

Star Spangled Banner

HERE IT COMES. The orchestra leader is raising his baton. "Oh say can you see . . ." Now we are all on our feet, the Marine lieutenant stiff as a poker . . . the Navy commander drawn to his full height . . . the young men in blue and khaki, the Waves, the Wacs, the girl Marines straight, slim, motionless . . . the women in sequins and feathers, the substantial men in dark suits looking solemnly ahead, enveloped in a strange new dignity. A moment ago we were a chattering, craning theater audience.

Why do I tingle from head to foot—often as I have done this? Now I see it waving—the flag—at the head of American columns marching through the Arc de Triomphe, from the flagship of a great grey fleet in the Pacific, over Army cantonments, behind smooth stepping bands in parades, being lowered at West Point at sunset.

The whole proud past of America sweeps before me: Washington crossing the Delaware, the flag spread valiantly behind him; the Stars and Stripes emerging out of the dawn over Fort McHenry to reassure Francis Scott Key nervously pacing a ship's deck, carried by charging men at Bull Run, Antietam, the Battle of the Wilderness, waving above Dewey at Manila Bay, signaling the message to sinking Europe, "The Yanks Are Coming."

All that is America. And I am part of it! I am an American!

YET—YET—there are the British knowing the same warm swell of pride when they hear the majestic strains of "God Save the King;" the French thrilling to the stirring notes of the Marseillaise. And—there are the Germans goosestepping arrogantly to the militant "Deutschland Uber Alles," the Japanese moved to patriotic ecstasy by the strains of Kimingayo. Yes, and there are the men in the jungles rallying their own with their tom-toms and gourd rattles and their tribal chants.

Is that what I am feeling—the vainglory of tribe. Is my uplift of soul only gang security? Is this the same thing for which the Nazis are fighting? And the Japanese? Is it but my human inferiority, my fear, my vanity, my will to power?

Surely not . . . Yet, has not this same devotion to a banner helped set brother against brother through the ages? Ah, but in America it is different . . . But does not every nation think the same of itself?

No, this is something else. Our "Star Spangled Banner" stands for more than "our gang." It stands for a dream, the American dream . . . Still do not all nations have their dreams, their ideals?

But this is not a national dream. It is a dream for humanity, for human freedom. It is more than a dream, it is an experiment toward which human hopes and aspirations throughout the world have been turned for three centuries. It is the beginning of something that will yet be greater.

NO, I AM NOT thrilling only to martial music and visions of marching men. I am seeing the Pilgrims on a wintry coast; the Calverts proclaiming religious freedom in Maryland; the men in Independence Hall drawing a constitution to embody man's long heritage of equality before the law handed down through the Hebrew Scriptures, Greek philosophy, Roman jurisprudence, the Christian religion, Alfred the Great, Runnymede, Cromwell; Lincoln writing the Emancipation Proclamation; state legislatures ratifying constitutional amendments to extend human liberty; the slowly developing passion of a people for social and economic as well as political justice.

I feel the spirit of America—the fierce, personal independence of its people, their neighborliness, their energy, generosity, their dislike of war, but their courage and efficiency in facing it, their evangelical belief in their political faith, their sense of their destiny.

Dare I tingle with pride when I hear the soaring notes of "The Star Spangled Banner"? Yes, but not because of my Nation's power or its victories. Only if the American dream is being sustained and passed on.

Minority's Choice

Presumably the two men figuring in the recent election are the best we have. Then if we have a purely democratic form of government, the leading light of the minority should be selected by the President as his principal aide and assistant to keep him advised as to the ideas of the other 48 per cent of the qualified voters.

When Messrs. Stimson and Knox were chosen as Cabinet members, the whole world applauded. Both have been loyal and nonpartisan, and Mr. Knox's death was a sad blow to everyone.

Then why not confound the skeptics of democratic government for and by the people by inviting the leader of the minority party to be assistant to the President, in place of someone who has not as yet proved his ability as an executive, nor his popularity with the mass of the people?

French Democracy

By Sumner Welles

Rebirth Of Popular Government

REPORTS WHICH COME to us of events in France are confused and confusing. But what is noteworthy are the increasing evidences that the masses of the French people are already making it plain that they are determined to establish a new form of democratic government, more truly popular and more efficient than that of the Third Republic. What is remarkable is not the extent of the confusion which exists. It is rather that this confusion is far less than that which might well have been anticipated.

It is difficult for us here in the United States to estimate the full extent of the political and material disaster which the French people have suffered. It is, however, imperative for us to appraise it realistically if we are to pursue an understanding policy toward France during these coming and determining months. We would also do well to try to see clearly the situation in which the French people at present find themselves.

Much emphasis has been laid upon the stories of the relative comfort in which the people of Normandy were living at the time of the invasion of the Allied Forces of Liberation. These reports were true. But scant mention has been made of the dire distress of the French civilian population in almost every other part of France. Undernourishment has been prevalent among great numbers of the French people and in particular among the children.

The American commanders are doing their utmost to bring some measure of relief to the inhabitants of Paris and of the other large urban centers. But the military requirements of the Allied armies are tremendous and necessarily have first call upon transport facilities. The quantity of food already sent to Paris and several other cities is large. But the Parisians face the prospect of a winter without coal and without much hope of obtaining other much-needed supplies.

THESE PHYSICAL discomforts and privations, wearing as they are upon the morale of a people already sorely tried, are as nothing compared to other graver problems.

A large number of French inhabitants along the Atlantic Coast are still in German hands. There is no early likelihood of their liberation. French resistance forces are engaged in continuous but little publicized hostilities with these remaining German troops.

The civil population in the liberated regions has in its possession a far greater supply of arms than has the regular military establishment of the Provisional government. The orders to the French civilian groups to disarm, recently issued by General de Gaulle, are not yet being carried out. In the southwest of France a considerable number of Spanish Republicans, all armed, and aided by some of the French resistance groups, are paying scant heed to the authority of the Provisional government.

The Consultative Assembly which commenced its present sessions on November 7 in the French Senate Chamber is powerless to take any positive action. Composed of a small number of Senators and Deputies in the last Parliament of the Third Republic who are clear of any suspicion of collaboration, and of a far greater number of representatives of the contending factions of the resistance groups, it can offer little but an opportunity to blow off steam. Its functions are strictly limited to "recommendations."

THE STRENGTH of the Communist Party in France is unquestionably very great. The demands upon the government by the Communists are constantly increasing and already upon several occasions, as in the case of the demand that the Communist leader, Maurice Thorez, who had deserted during the war, be amnestied and permitted to return to France from Moscow, General de Gaulle has been obliged to give in to the insistence with which he was confronted from this quarter.

But notwithstanding these appalling obstacles to a speedy progress toward constitutional reconstruction, there are many signs which offer encouragement.

The government of General de Gaulle has now been recognized by all of the United Nations as the Provisional government of France. It has been accorded a seat on the European Advisory Council which was named primarily to deal with the question of the controls to be set up in Germany after her defeat. Mr. Churchill has announced that the British government desires that a strong French army be created in order to afford France her legitimate opportunity to cooperate in winning the victory, as well as in keeping the peace thereafter.

THESE STEPS and these official assurances have done much to strengthen and rally French national sentiment, and to persuade the French people that their country will by no means be ignored by the three major powers when the peace settlements are taken in hand. They have unquestionably sharpened a general determination to press ahead more vigorously with the job of cleaning up, of cutting out the cancers which have for so long afflicted the French body politic and of proceeding toward the establishment of a new constitutional government erected upon a more inherently popular system than that which was in operation during the Third Republic.

The Socialist Party already has held its convention to determine the course which it shall take in the local elections next winter.

The Radical-Socialist Party is about to do the same. There are reports that the Socialist Party is gaining popular strength at the expense of other traditional party alignments. Sentiment within the political parties of the Left is sharply opposed either to an alliance with the Communist Party, as in the days of the Popular Front, or to support of the methods favored by the Communist leaders for the election of a constituent assembly.

The number of newspapers published in Paris and in other cities is constantly increasing. There is no present indication of any tendency to monopolistic control of these sources of information. Liberty of the press is becoming more firmly established. The liberal elements within both the Catholic and Protestant churches are commencing to make their voices heard.

French passion for individual liberty is, in other words, once more asserting itself. There is today every reason for confidence that the France of the future will be a stronger and a worthier France than that of the decades between the wars.

Mr. Eden stated the outlook truly and well in the House of Commons the other day:

"Before now in her history France has shown powers of recuperation which have astounded the world. It is my belief she will do this again."

Low-Priced Clothing

We are glad you have taken up the cudgels on the scarcity of children's clothes. Work clothes, piece goods and all customarily low-priced clothing are in the same fix.

Many of us have tried for nearly two years to get WPB and OPA to do something about this. Those agencies will not take the steps necessary to assure adequate supplies of cheap clothing with effective price ceilings.

OCR, like WPB, passes the buck to OPA. Chief of OCR recently told consumer representatives he didn't believe WPB has power to require manufacturers to make the kind of clothing people need. Either Byrnes or WPB does have the power, as you will see by referring to statements of the President and of Byrnes early in 1943. Byrnes said he would use the powers of his new office to see that essential needs are met, "luxuries will have to go." Ask your wives, gentlemen, whether essential requirements have been met, and whether luxury clothing has had to go.

WPB officials refuse to exercise their powers to require textile mills and clothing factories to produce the kind of products the civilian population needs. Instead, they say OPA should raise prices on low-priced items, so that manufacturers will find it profitable to make them rather than luxury items.

Will you ask OPA to show you its undisclosed figures on textile and clothing profits during the last few years? Publish those figures, if you can get them, anad then tell us whether these industries should be bribed by still greater profit into serving basic public needs during a war.

Also, will you ask your wives whether OPA has kept clothing prices too low? Ask thew whether they can find products worth buying at low prices, or whether they get cheap quality for which they pay high prices.

OPA has never placed practical or enforceable price ceilings on clothing, except for a few special items, most of which are not in the stores. For more than a year it has promised to cut out the "converter racket" which rewards finishers for adding costly finish to textiles. Even today, OPA is not taking steps to apply workable and enforceable ceilings to clothing.

OCR and the Textile Bureau in WPB are responsible for the scarcity of cheap clothing. OPA is responsible for not keeping it cheap. If OCR now tells you about the "special programs" in WPB to get us some kind of clothing, let me write you again to tell you why those programs produce good publicity, but precious little clothing.

Daylight Saving

I believe year around daylight-saving was adopted as a war measure, mainly to conserve the use of electricity. I have often wondered how much was saved if any. Surely any gain during the winter months on one end of the day is lost on the other. I feel certain a poll of the average daily worker would be in favor of return to standard time. And how about the rural population?

Petrillo Dispute

By Mark Sullivan

A Case History

WHAT IS HERE set down is a condensed record of the relation between an individual named James C. Petrillo and the Government of the United States. The story has come out serially over some 2½ years—one doubts if the public grasps it as a whole.

Mr. Petrillo is head of a labor union, the American Federation of Musicians. As such, in June, 1942, he served an ultimatum on the companies which make recordings of music—that is, the records which are played on phonographs in homes, or in juke boxes, or are used by radio stations for broadcasting.

The ultimatum was that members of Mr. Petrillo's union would no longer play for the making of such records, unless the companies would comply with a demand made by Mr. Petrillo. The nature of the demand is not pertinent here—though the reader should understand that it was extremely drastic. For the present article it is enough to say that on August 1, 1942, the making of music records ceased. There weren't any more.

PASS NOW to the relations between Mr. Petrillo and the Government.

First, the Department of Justice, and the courts. An Assistant Attorney General of the United States, Thurman Arnold, took action against Mr. Petrillo. He filed a suit in the District Court for northern Illinois, asking that Mr. Petrillo and his union be enjoined from carrying out their ultimatum.

No dice. The Court, October 14, 1942, refused the injunction. An act of Congress, passed years ago, the Norris-LaGuardia Act, forbids courts to issue injunctions in labor disputes.

The Army and Navy. Mr. Elmer Davis, head of the Office of War Information, wrote an official letter to Mr. Petrillo, asking him to "withdraw your ultimatum." Mr. Davis said he spoke "on behalf of the War Department, the Navy Department," and other governmental agencies. The men in the services, Mr. Davis said, were being deprived of entertainment by the ban on music recording, resulting in "a negative effect on morale."

Mr. Petrillo answered no.

Congress. A Senate subcommittee investigated the ban. Mr. Petrillo testified volubly. But all he said amounted to one short word, no.

The War Labor Board. The board, June 15, 1944, issued an order directing Mr. Petrillo to withdraw his ban.

Mr. Petrillo didn't.

THE PRESIDENT. Last month, October 4, President Roosevelt sent Mr. Petrillo a telegram. The President's message was very gentle. In terms of music it was the Lullaby by Brahms. Mr. Roosevelt just sort of crooned to Mr. Petrillo—his message sounded like Frank Sinatra. He didn't command Mr. Petrillo, he "requested" him, and hardly even that. He did remind Mr. Petrillo that he and his union had not complied with the order of the War Labor Board. But the President actually justified Mr. Petrillo's noncompliance—on the ground that music recording is not a war industry, hence the ban on it did not "impede the war effort." However, Mr. Roosevelt said that Mr. Petrillo's "noncompliance may encourage other instances of noncompliance." He said Mr. Petrillo ought to obey the Labor Board's order even though he "may consider the decision wrong. Therefore . . . I request your union to accept the directive orders of the National War Labor Board. What you regard as your loss will certainly be your country's gain."

But Mr. Petrillo did not obey the Labor Board's order.

(A future historian, observing the gentleness of Mr. Roosevelt's message to a labor leader, may note that the date of it was five weeks before an election in which Mr. Roosevelt was a candidate. The present-day commentator refrains from any innuendo so invidious.)

It is said occasionally that the United States now has a "labor government." The phrase is inadequate. What we really have is a "labor supergovernment," labor leaders above the Government.

Cigarette Shortage

I wish to find the answer as to why popular brands of cigarettes are so scarce. Now please don't answer with the old gag, "Don't you know there's a war on?" If you do I'll fire back at you, "I certainly do, because I was in Europe at the start and for 1 year and 10 months after."

During that time I was forced to deny myself plenty of the essentials of life. The point is, I thought we were short of certain things here so that our boys over there could have plenty. But I have heard from several of our boys that on several of the French base sections both cigarettes and chocolate are scarce. This situation could be understood up on the front lines, but on the base sections and relay supply lines I do not see it.

Three Reported Chosen For Surplus Board

PEOPLE AND JOBS. It was reported on excellent authority yesterday that the name of Sam Husbands, a protege of Jesse Jones and a member of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation who was slated to be hairman of the Surplus Property Board, was stricken from the White House list. A few days earlier the name of Sam Husbands, a protege of Jesse Jones and a member of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, who was slated to be chairman, was stricken from the White House list. A few days earlier the name of Col. Joseph P. Woodlock, whose sponsor is Will Clayton, was knocked from the list. Liberal members of Congress protested vigorously to the proposed appointments of Husbands and Woodlock. It now looks as though they'll win—and of they do, it'll be a body clow to the prestige of Commerce Secretary Jones.

KLUTTZ

JOBS AND PEOPLE: John W. Pehle, administrator of the War Refugee Board, has solid support to succeed Paul Appleby as deputy administrator of the Budget Bureau. He's on leave as chief of Treasury's Foreign Trade Funds Control. . . . Donald Nelson will move into the State Department offices formerly occupied by Laughlin Currie and Currie is moving up into the old offices of Eugene Casey, who's on military leave. The inside word is that Nelson will remain only temporarily as an adviser to FDR. . . . That he'll end up either as a department head and an official member of the Cabinet, or else he'll be put in charge of an independent agency to foster world trade. . . . Some of his enthusiastic backers in the Justice Department say Jim McGranery, the Assistant to the Attorney General, should be appointed Labor Secretary.

RECREATION: The postelection letdown is being felt in the city's saloons. Business has been off from 20 to 30 per cent. At the Press Club, it has slumped a third. Uncertainty, apparently, is good for the liquor business . . . GENERAL ACCOUNTING employes will stage a runoff election next Tuesday to chose the employe member of the Board of Efficiency Rating Appeals. The contest will be between the three top primary leaders who were as follows: John K. Willis, 1162 votes; Joseph Nacrelli, 839, and V. R. Weethee, 638 . . . JOB: War Undersecretary Robert Patterson will lose his on January 1 unless Congress continues the law that set up the undersecretaryship. The job should be made permanent but Congress probably will extend it for the duration . . . CIVIL SERVICE needs recruiting representatives, $3886 a year . . . The special police in Government buildings are helping along the Sixth War Loan Drive by selling "voices" at a dollar each. First prize will be $1000, followed by four $500 bonds, and 20 $100 bonds. A total of $5000 in bonds will be given away.

The President's letter to Dr. Vannevar Bush should set to rest rumors that his Office of Scientific Research and Development will go out of business. He proposed flatly that research be continued in the postwar period to improve national health and living standards. The truth is that the report that OSRD would fold came from a letter Dr. Bush had sent each employe which hinted that something along this line would be done after victory over Germany. The employes, perhaps, read more into the letter than Dr. Bush had intended, but anyway, it appears to have had a wholesome effect. Not only the President, but Army and Navy officials, have urged OSRD to stay in business. The agency has been largely responsible for the development of weapons that are helping to shorten the war.

Now the plan is for OSRD to continue full blast until after the war with Germany. Then all projects will be examined and those that can be used in the war with the Japs—and most of them can be—will be continued with vigor. After we whip the Japs, the OSRD, as such, will be wound up, but its work of peacetime value will be carried on either as an independent research agency or else it'll be transferred to an old-line agency. Several weeks ago for example, the Public Health Service put in a bid for its health research projects but it was decided that OSRD must carry on.

OSRD has the Nation's scientific talent under its wing—a billion dollars worth. When the report got out that it would fold up, both the Government—through War Manpower—and industry tried to lure away many of the scientists. Several signed contracts with private firms that they would go to work after the war. To stop this sort of thing, OSRD took a poll of its employes and found that only 25 per cent had no intentions of returning to their former jobs and they were told to stop worrying . . . that they'd be placed in either Government or industry when the agency's work was completed. It worked fine and now the employes have settled back to work. It would be swell if all Government agencies could assure jobs to their employes.

Darden Faces Complex Knot On War Ballot

Richmond, Va., Nov. 21 (AP).—Governor Darden said today he was trying to determine what could be done to give the voting privilege to Virginians in the armed forces but that frankly it was no easy job in the light of the Supreme Court's ruling that the War Voters Act was unconstitutional.

"I think the first thing to do is to determine what can be done and I think that is my responsibility," the governor said. "But I have no plan yet."

He said he proposed to confer with interested groups such as the American Legion, in seeking some plan of action.

Because of the problem posed by the necessity of discarding the act passed by the 1944 General Assembly, the governor has decided to forego his contemplated trip to Biloxi, Miss., to attend the Southern Governor's Conference this week.

The State Supreme Court's opinion yesterday that soldiers and sailors must appear in person before registrars to register to vote was viewed as an impossible or well nigh impossible obstacle to overcome in any new law that the General Assembly might devise in a special session.

The alternative of a constitutional convention to make changes in the Constitution itself is an elaborate procedure of alternate special sessions of the assembly and elections. It was estimated today that such a plan would require at least three months.

The Supreme Court ruled that the War Voters Act was unconstitutional both from the standpoint of having servicemen's poll taxes paid from a special State fund and from the standpoint of having officers in the armed service as registrars.

2 Men Killed In Condemned W. Va. Mine

Williamson, W. Va., Nov. 21 (AP).—Two men were killed today by a slate fall in the No. 6 mine of the Red Jacket Coal Corp., which had been closed the past three weeks in protest, the United Mine Workers Union asserted, of allegedly unsafe working conditions.

The victims were identified as Monroe Dotson, 40, a motorman, and Walter Finley, 38, a wireman, who had been employed by the firm 12 and 15 years, respectively.

Charles Kiser, UMW field representative, said in a statement that the deaths resulted from "carelessness on the part of the chief of the States mines department, Jesse Redyard," and that "he should be held responsible for them."

Several of the Red Jacket Corp.'s six mines, in the Matewan district, were closed by the walkout three weeks ago, but most of the estimated 1000 men made idle by the stoppage returned to work last week. The No. 6 operation resumed yesterday.

Kiser asserted that the miners cited 72 alleged violations of the mining code, and he said they had returned to work only "after the company had presumably done something about them."

Va. Educators To Meet Nov. 27

Richmond, Va., Nov. 21 (AP).—The Virginia Education Association will meet here November 27 through the 30th. Among matters up for consideration are tenure of teachers, salary standards, retirement and school finances.

Francis S. Chase, executive secretary of the association, said today that the tenure committee will present a recommendation for continuing contracts for teachers. This will call for a probationary period of three years for a new teacher, after which the teacher will become a permanent member of the staff, with a continuing instead of an annual contract until dismissed by a stated procedure.

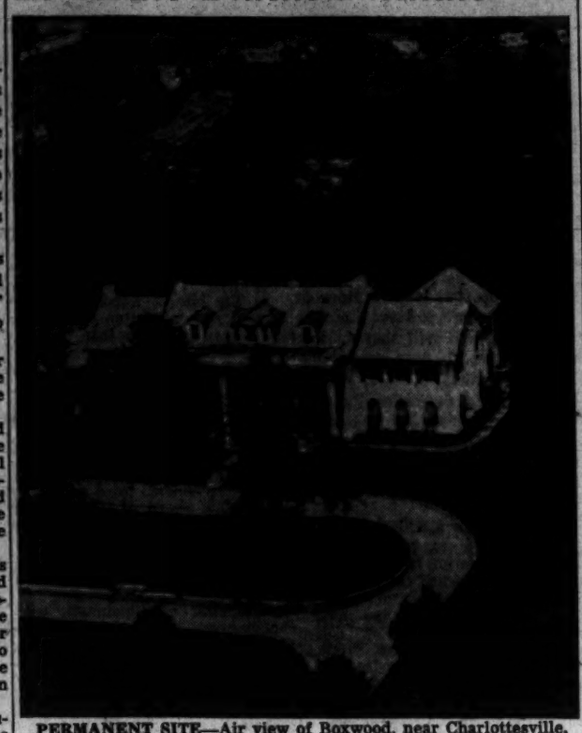

The salary standards committee will recommend a State-wide minimum salary for all teachers regardless of the grade taught or the race of the teacher. It will not be a uniform scale, Chase said, but will provide that no salary may go below the minimum salary set up and there shall be no discriminations of any kind.

No Bids on State Offer To Sell 3329 Trees

Richmond, Va., Nov. 21 (AP).—No bids were received today at the State Game Commission for 3329 trees offered for sale on the State game farm in New Kent County, pursuant to an act of the 1944 General Assembly.

T. E. Clarke, executive director of the commission, estimated total volume of the timber offered at 513,872 board feet. Most of the trees are pines, with some oak, gum, beach, cypress, red maple and yellow poplar. The timber was being offered on a selective cutting basis, and five other lots were to be advertised.

Albemarle Estate Is Purchased To House Textile Institute

PERMANENT SITE—Air view of Boxwood, near Charlottesville, Va., which has been purchased for the permanent home of Institute of Textile Technology. Plans were revealed to build at least nine additional buildings on the 15-acre site, part of which is shown Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 21 (Spl.).—Boxwood, 15-acre estate of W. Alonzo Rinehart, located just a few miles west of Charlottesville, adjoining the Farmington Country Club, has been secured as the permanent site of the Institute of Textile Technology, an institution for research and graduate study in the field of textile science.

The deed, recorded this morning in the clerk's office of the Circuit Court, shows the cost price to have been $65,000.

It is expected that plans for moving the institute from its present temporary quarters in the former Beta Theta Pi fraternity house at the University of Virginia to Boxwood will get under way immediately and that the transfer will be completed some time next month.

Will Erect 9 Buildings

According to Ward Delaney, director of the institute, the principal offices will be located in the beautiful Colonial residence at Boxwood, a three-story building erected in 1921, and on which many improvements were added six years later.

At least nine additional buildings will be added to the property, construction of some of which is expected to get under way early next year. These buildings, of two and three stories, will be located along the back garden and will be of a type of architecture to harmonize with the present home.

The institute, according to Mr. Delaney, will ultimately have a staff of 150 scientists engaged in research and teaching and an enrollment of 60 candidates for masters' and doctors' degrees. Students will be limited to 15 each year, chosen fborm the top five per cent of each year's college graduates in science.

Has 191 Members

A further service of the institute will be the maintenance of a library and editorial department which will make available to the textile industry the results not only of the institute's own research, but of developments in the textile field throughout the world. Assembling the institute's library is as yet far from complete, but already $27,000 has been invested in books.

The institute will derive its revenue chiefly from the fees of textile mills which are admitted to membership and which will share the benefits of its work. One hundred and ninety-one mills, from Maine to Texas, have already joined.

Oyster Catch Under Average

Baltimore, Nov. 21 (AP).—Edwin Warfield, jr., chairman of the Tidewater Fisheries Commission, said today the oyster catch in Maryland waters is falling below the average this year because of the shortage of shuckers and packers.

Although the supply is limited because of the closing of a large number of bars, Warfield said the small catch was due to the fact that tongers and dredgers are working only a few days a week because shuckers can handle only a small portion of the normal catch.

There are about 30 dredgers now working the Bay, he continued, with the catch for each ranging from 30 to 70 bushels per day. Warfield said that in the tongers' areas, where bars are well stocked, 20 to 35 bushels per boat are being taken daily.

The fisheries chairman commented that the oyster production now is at the same level as during the first world war, when the total crop was two and a half million bushels.

Sailor Asks Pardon In Bigamy Case

Richmond, Va., Nov. 21 (AP).—Governor Darden today received the petition for a pardon for Frank D. Dewar, the sailor who married the captain's daughter.

Dewar, who enlisted in the Navy May 5, 1942, married Bette Dreisonstok, daughter of Capt. J. Y. Dreisonstock, USN, and his father-in-law learned that Dewar previously had married Constance Ballesteros in California, and that the divorce decree had not become final.

Herndon F. Jeffrey, jr., Richmond attorney, who represents Dewar and Bette Driesonstok, today presented the petition for pardon to Governor Darden. Jeffrey said the "girl is just as anxious as ever" to marry Dewar.

Oyster Catch Under Average

Baltimore, Nov. 21 (AP).—Edwin Warfield, jr., chairman of the Tidewater Fisheries Commission, said today the oyster catch in Maryland waters is falling below the average this year because of the shortage of shuckers and packers.

Although the supply is limited because of the closing of a large number of bars, Warfield said the small catch was due to the fact that tongers and dredgers are working only a few days a week because shuckers can handle only a small portion of the normal catch.

There are about 30 dredgers now working the Bay, he continued, with the catch for each ranging from 30 to 70 bushels per day. Warfield said that in the tongers' areas, where bars are well stocked, 20 to 35 bushels per boat are being taken daily.

The fisheries chairman commented that the oyster production now is at the same level as during the first world war, when the total crop was two and a half million bushels.

Sailor Asks Pardon In Bigamy Case

Richmond, Va., Nov. 21 (AP).—Governor Darden today received the petition for a pardon for Frank D. Dewar, the sailor who married the captain's daughter.

Dewar, who enlisted in the Navy May 5, 1942, married Bette Dreisonstok, daughter of Capt. J. Y. Dreisonstock, USN, and his father-in-law learned that Dewar previously had married Constance Ballesteros in California, and that the divorce decree had not become final.

Herndon F. Jeffrey, jr., Richmond attorney, who represents Dewar and Bette Driesonstok, today presented the petition for pardon to Governor Darden. Jeffrey said the "girl is just as anxious as ever" to marry Dewar.

Md. Auto Toll Mounts to 307 In 10 Months

Baltimore, Nov. 21 (AP).—Maryland's 194 high mark of 46 highway fatalities during October increased traffic deaths for the first ten months of the year to 307, four more than during the corresponding 1943 period, the State Traffic Safety Commission reported today.

The October total was four less, however, than the 50 killed in October, 1943. It compared with 31 victims in September and 38 in May, the previous 1944 high.

Governor O'Conor, who released the report, urged extreme caution by all users of the streets and highways, saying that the two months normally the wost of the year—November and December—yet remain.

During October there were 1,074 accidents, with 604 persons injured in addition to the 46 killed. Of that total, 716 accidents, 13 deaths and 352 injuries occurred in the City of Baltimore.

Pedestrian accidents were responsible for 50 per cent of the fatalities—11 of the 13 killed in Baltimore and 12 of the 33 killed in the counties.

Ten of Maryland's 23 counties went without a fatality during October, among them Calvert, Carroll, Garrett, Kent, Montgomery, Queen Anne's, St. Mary's, Somerset, Talbot and Worcester.

The deaths listed in the others included six in Prince Georges, five in Harford, three each in Caroline and Frederick, two each in Allegany and Washington and one each in Anne Arundel, Cecil, Charles, Dorchester, Howard and Wicomico.

Among the cities and towns, Baltimore led with 13 fatalities. The only other incorporated places to list fatalities were Frostburg, Catonsville, Denton and Essex, with one each.

$50,000 Damage Suit Filed Against Annapolis Heads

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 21 (AP).—A former deputy sheriff of Anne Arundel County, Henry Abrams, filed a $50,000 damage suit against William U. McCready and Bernard C. Hoff as individuals and as the mayor and an alderman of Annapolis and against the counselor and the board of city aldermen.

Abrams, 42-year-old tavern proprietor, stated that he had served continuously as a deputy sheriff from 1938 until October 19, 1944, when his resignation was demanded.

The declaration stated: "That on or about the 10th day of October, 1944, William U. McCready and Bernard C. Hoff, wickedly and maliciously did defame the character of the plaintiff at the meeting of the city council of the City of Annapolis, by statements concerning his record. . . ."

Pulaski Barbers Promise All-Out Bond Talking Job

Pulaski, Va., Nov. 21 (AP).—Pulaski barbers—members of a profession skilled in conversational fluency as well as razor stropping—have volunteered their services in selling the Sixth War Bond campaign to their customers.

Oscar Jordan, drive chairman, said the Pulaski barbers have promised to do an all-out talking job of selling war bonds to prospects in their chairs, as they are unable to get out and help in house-to-house soliciting. The barbers have held a meeting and agreed to talk to every customer getting in their chairs about buying bonds. They believe they will get at least three cracks at every customer during the campaign.

Trailer Fire Fatal To Two Probed

Richmond, Va., Nov. 20 (AP).—City Fire Chief Finnegan today ordered an investigation to determine the cause of the trailer fire which Saturday claimed the lives of Mrs. Mary June Trowick, 23, and her 3-month-old daughter, and inflicted third degree burns on her husband, David Trowick, a 27-year-old bus mechanic.

The fire chief also ordered a check made of stoves used by other families living in trailers in Richmond. He said the fire in the Trowick trailer was thought to have been caused by the explosion of an oil stove.

Hospital attendants reported that Trowick's condition remained critical today. The family came here last week from near Raleigh, N. C.

Md. Warworker Gets Year as Bigamist

Baltimore, Nov. 21 (AP).—Roy Charles, 26-year-old warworker from Logan County, W. Va., was sentenced to a year in the House of Correction today after he pleaded guilty to bigamy before Judge John T. Tucker in Criminal Court.

Charles admitted marrying Clara White of Baltimore last September 15, although he had a wife and two children in West Virginia. He married Mrs. Gladys Charles in 1938. Charles came to Baltimore last August.

Md. Farmers' Market System Called 'Woefully Inefficient

Baltimore, No. 21 (Spl.)—The major problem on the farm front now and in the years to come is the "woefully inefficient" marketing system, according to Dr. S. H. Devault, head agricultural economist of the University of Maryland

Addressing the 29th annual conference of Maryland farm extension workers here today, Dr. Devault said there is need for more farmer cooperation in every stage of marketing, "including assembling, grading, packing, storing, processing, shipping, finishing and merchandising."

"The system is woefully inefficient now," he added. "The farmer has been receiving only 52 per cent of the retail price of the commodities he produces and on many of these products . . . is receiving less than 35 per cent.

"Consumers pay in the neighborhood of two and one half times the price that producers receive for fresh fruits and vegetables.

"A study made of the Baltimore wholesale fruit and vegetable markets indicates that excessive handling and delivery costs for fruits and vegetables alone in this market amount to from $750,000 to one million dollars annually. The saving that could be effected through a reduction in the cost of distribution by having a modern consolidated wholesale produce market in Baltimore would pay for the market improvements in four years," he said.

Discussing developments coming from agricultural research, Dr. W. B. Kemp, acting director of the agricultural experiment station at the University of Maryland, predicted that new farm machinery will make it possible to get larger yields of forage per acre than yields of grain. He pointed out that research will enable the Maryland farmer to step up his efficiency, making him strong competitively relative to other food producing sections of the Nation.

At a business meeting of the Maryland County Agents' Association, C. Z. Keller of Princess Anne was elected president, succeeding P. E. Clark of Upper Marlboro. W. G. Myers of Ellicott City was named vice president, succeeding Keller. Harry Beggs of Cambridge was reelected secretary-treasurer. Retiring President Clark was chosen to represent the State as a delegate to the annual meeting of the National County Agents' Association to be held in Chicago next month.

Other speakers today included Paul E. Nystrom, State county agent leader, who outlined how extension workers can best meet farm problems and developments. The afternoon sessions were arranged so the men and women met separately to discuss their respective technical fields of work.

This evening the county extension workers were the dinner guests of Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland.

Kirkman Asks State School Budget Raise

Baltimore, Nov. 21 (AP).—Budget increases of $821,462 in 1946 and $1,318,639 in 1947 have been requested by the State Education Department to provide for increasing high school enrollment and an expected "abnormal first-grade enrollment," Walter N. Kirkman said today.

Kirkman, director of the budget, reported that the budget submitted by Thomas G. Pullen, jr., State superintendent of schools, fixed the needs of the system at $9,427,921 for 1946 and $9,925,098 for 1947.

The 1945 appropriation is $8,606,459.

Birth Rate Rise Cited

In explaining the requested increase, Dr. Pullen said he believed high school enrollment in 1946 will have reached its prewar level and estimated there would be a 20 per cent increase in first-grade enrollments in each of the next two years because of the greatly increased birth rate since 1937.

In addition, he called attention to the fact that money for the purchase of buses, which cannot be obtained now, was included in the budget figures.

The teacher retirement fund appropriation was fixed at $1,597,011 for 1946 and $1,693,831 for 1947. The increase was attributed by Dr. Pullen to equalization of salaries.

Tuition Now Free

The elimination of tuition in the four teachers' colleges caused an increase to $640,539 for 1946 and $646,947 for 1947 against the $524,409 appropriation this year.

Other increase included: Vocational rehabilitation, from the present $50,808 to $77,500; equalization fund, from $2,366,799 to $2,792,447 for 1946 and $3,171,775 for 1947; administrative expense, now $64,161, to $75,974 for 1946 and $74,920 for 1947.

33 Jap-Americans Relocated in Va.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 21 (AP).—Thirty-three Japanese-Americans from the West Coast have been relocated in Virginia, four of them in Richmond, the War Relocation Authority said in Washington today.

The civilian evacuees are part of 29,740 persons removed from the Pacific area and relocated in all States except South Carolina.

The authority's breakdown, as of November 15, showed four Japanese-Americans in Vienna, 12 in Arlington, 3 in Falls Church, 4 in McLean (Fairfax County), and one each in Warrenton, East Falls Church, Hamburg, Newport News, Lynchburg and Alexandria.

Two-thirds of those relocated, it was estimated, are American citizens. All told, evacuees have been resettled in 267 cities and towns, as well as in rural and semirural areas.

William R. Monks, 52, Buried in Martinsburg

Martinsburg, W. Va., Nov. 21. (Spl).—Services were held from the home here this afternoon for William Raymond Monks, 52, prominent businessman, who shot himself fatally in a bedroom at his home Sunday evening.

Coroner C. G. Power, giving a verdict of suicide, said death had apparently been instantaneous. Monks had been in ill health for some years. He came to this city 16 years ago to assume managership of the branch here of the Schmidt Baking Co. and held the position until death.

Memorial Rites Held For Winchester Soldier

Winchester, Va., Nov. 21 (Spl.). Memorial services were held at the West Cork Street Church of Christ last night for Sergt. Richard Owen, a member, who died in action on D-Day. At the same time a church service flag was dedicated.

The flag was carried to its place in the church by Maurice Blosser, who has been wounded three different times in action and is now home on leave.

New Md. Law Licenses All Holly Dealers

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 21 (AP).—This year for the first time, all holly dealers operating in Maryland must be licensed by the State Department of Forests and Parks.

The Free State is now virtually the center of the holly industry, State Forester Joseph F. Kaylor explained, because the butchery of trees in northeastern States has seriously depleted that crop.

Licensing of dealers, plus the department's own certification and marketing services, will afford needed protection to Maryland growers of the Christmas green and to purchasers, he said.

Current crops on the Eastern Shore and in central counties are among the finest in the history of the State; and the industry, which has fluctuated in the past, should bring about $400,000 annually to the Shore, Kaylor predicted.

The making of holly wreaths also provides part time employment for approximately 10,000 persons.

To assure standard quality, fresh cut holly, tightly packed in closed fiber containers, the forestry department operates its certification service.

Land owners arrange for forestry representatives to supervise the cutting of the trees and packing of the boxes, which buyers can order December 5 from the department of Forests and Parks, State Office Building, Annapolis.

Proceeds, except to cover costs of inspection and packaging, go to the growers, Kaylor added.

Md. Sportsmen Vote to Retain Turkey Season

Hancock, Md., Nov. 21 (AP).—The State Game and Inland Fish Commission planned today another meeting to decide whether the current open season on wild turkeys in western Maryland should be continued.

Approximately 50 sportsmen and game wardens from the area, meeting with commission members last night, voted unanimously to retain the open season scheduled to end December 31, but recommended that the bag limit be reduced from four to one.

Petitions favoring an open season were sent in by Frederick and Washington Counties. The session was called after a group of sportsmen had requested a closed season on grounds that the turkey population was too low to warrant hunting.

A game warden told the meeting that 20 birds had been killed in Washington County and more than 30 in Allegany since the season opened November 1., indicating that a "fair number" of turkeys was available.

Harrisonburg Radio Station Changes Hands

Frederick L. Altman was authorized by the Federal Communications Commission yesterday to acquire control of Shenandoah Valley Broadcasting Corporation, licensee of station WSVA, Harrisonburg, Va.

The transaction involved the purchase of 50 shares of common stock from Charles P. Blackley for $7000.

R. B. Golighty Burial Today; Stock Raiser

Winchester, Va., Nov. 21. (Spl.) Funeral services will be held Wednesday morning at the residence for Robert Bruce Golightly, 71, prominent county farmer and stock producer who died Sunday

He was a native of the county and is survived by his wife, the former Miss Hattie Brewer, and eight children.

Miss Susie Abell

Leonardtown, Md., Nov. 21.—Requiem mass will be held tomorrow at the St. Aloysious Catholic Church here, for Miss Susie Abell, 72. She is survived by two sisters Mrs. Leonard Hayden, and Mrs. Louis Brown; and two brothers, John and Robert Abell, all of Leonardtown, and one adopted son Corpl. Aloysious Mattingly Abell, somewhere in Germany.

Mrs. Anna M. Hale

Winchester, Va., Nov. 21.—Funeral services will be held Wednesday afternoon for Mrs. Anna Mary Hale, 73, who moved here from Arlington five years ago following the death of her husband, Frank Hale. Four sisters and brothers survive.

Fred E. Johnson

Winchester, Va., Nov. 21.—Funeral services were held this afternoon for Fred E. Johnson, well-known city merchant, who died in his sleep Sunday morning. He was 68. A member of the IOOF, the Rouse Fire Company, the Braddock Street Church and the Golden Rule Bible Class. He had been associated in the grocery business for a number of years.

Mrs. Flora E. Brown

Martinsburg, W. Va., Nov. 21.—Services were held from the home here today for Mrs. Flora E. Brown, 59, prominent in church and B. & O. auxiliary circles, who died at a local hospital yesterday. She was a native of Charles Town, W. Va., daughter of the late John A. and Elizabeth VanMetre Engle. Surviving are two sons, Maj. Walter H. Brown, with the United States Army in Alaska; Garnet L. Brown, with the United States Army on Guam; one daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Rife, this city; one brother and three sisters, all of Baltimore.

G. Rudolph Vincenti

Baltimore, Nov. 21 (AP).—Governor O'Conor and Mayor Theodore R. McKeldin of Baltimore will be honorary pallbearers of funeral services tomorrow for G. Rudolph Vincenti, 59-year-old president of Monumental Distillers, Inc. Vincenti, a native of Varese, Italy, died yesterday at Union Memorial Hospital.

Funds Released For Drawing Plans At Two Colleges

Richmond, Va., Nov. 21 (AP).—Expenditure of four per cent of the capital outlay appropriation provided by the General Assembly for the University of Virginia and Mary Washington College for the preparation of architectural and engineering plans and specifications has been authorized by Governor Darden.

Included in the approved expenditures are $115,930 for a dormitory, cafeteria and student activities building; $11,295 for remodeling and furnishing the north wing of the old hospital; $8,885 for remodeling the south wing; $4,575 for additions to the chemistry building; $4,740 for additions to the power plant; $2,180 for heating tunnels, and $2,200 for the completion of internes' quarters, all at the University of Virginia; and $2,565 for renovating Willard Hall; $2,960 for an infirmary building, and $2,370 for an additional unit to the dining hall, all at Mary Washington College.

150-Pound Deer Given Darden

Richmond, Va., Nov. 21 (AP).—Governor Darden today was presented a 150-pound deer as a Thanksgiving gift from the Pamunkey Indians.

The presentation is an annual event in Virginia. The Indians of the reservation, located 42 miles east of Richmond, pay no taxes and each year they give the good will offering to the Governor of the Commonwealth. Today's offering was presented by Chief Tecumseh Cook and former Chief Paul Miles. Another 150-pound deer was presented by the Indians to Memorial Hospital here.

Stolen Bus Found South of Richmond

Baltimore, Nov. 21 (AP).—Greyhound Bus Line officials reported that a stolen 70-passenger vehicle worth $19,000 had been found, no by police but by a bus driver.

The bus, stolen from the concern's Baltimore garage last Sunday morning, was discovered 15 miles south of Richmond, the motor burned out.

Georgia Tech, Tulsa to Clash in Orange Bowl

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Not since that 73-0 affair in which the Chicago Bears stampeded through the Redskins in 1940 have the Griffith Stadium customers see nas devastating a T-formation attack as Coach Greasy Neale unfurled last week end. From the Eagles, the Redskins got a 60-minute lesson in how to make the T a magic brew.

POV

Down on the sidelines, Neale was wig-wagging all of the Eagles' plays, on both defense and offense. A la Connie Mack he moved his ball players into defense position and called all the plays when the Eagles had the ball. Right up until the ball was snapped, Neale quarterbacked the team.

Then Roy Zimmerman took charge. He faked the Redskins out of position with his deceptive handling of the ball. Hiding the ball on his hip, he gave his empty hand to Jack Hinkle or Ben [illegible] their charges into the Redskin line and then handed the [illegible] package to Steve Van Buren, or Mel Bleeker or Ernie Steele.

The customers, like the Redskins, had difficulty following the ball. That's why, after the game, when Charles Ford, Washington attorney and sports addict, was introduced to Neale he said with a smile: "I'm disgusted to meet you, Mr. Neale. I won't like you until you slow up that T-Formation so I can see what's happening to the ball. It's not fair to the fans."

Throughout the game, Neale and his sideline antics were a red-necked exhibit of a coach apparently fulminating all sorts of dire things to any errant ball player on the Eagles. He has a reputation as a driver and acid-tongued boss of any ball club he coaches, but Neale's players swear by him.

"Don't get him wrong," said one of his players. "Know what happened when he took Al Sherman out of the game? Al came out of there almost crying after he went in for one play and threw a pass that Sammy Baugh intercepted. The first man to get to him was Neale, and Sherman got a big pat on the back, and was told to 'forget it. You're going to throw some more passes for us before the day is over.' "

Neale is frank enough about his T-Formation. "Speed makes it go," he says. "You can do wonders with backs who can run like Van Buren and Steele and Bleeker. There are a lot of plays on which we don't even bother with the end or defensive back playing on one side. We can fake them out of position, and then run aruond 'em. It only takes a little fake."

His boy Mel Bleeker, is the speed man of his backfield despite the fact that Van Buren has been the biggest ground gainer. Bleeker finished second last year in the national intercollegiate brodjump. "He came to me as a good bal carrier out of college," says Neale, "but he was the worst defensive back I ever saw with the exception of Zimmerman. He never played on defense in college, and that was the trouble."

The two ong lobbing passes which Zimmerman completed against the Redskins was strictly unorthodox throws and usually vulnerable to interception, but they both worked. "That's because we had fast men who could get down field," said Neale. "Zimmerman is stubborn. I had to make him throw that kind of a pass. I proved it to him by daring him to throw one over Bleeker's head in practice. He was convinced when Bleeker caught everything he threw."

The Redskin' T-Attack was a clumsy thing in contrast to the smooth play of the Eagles, and Neale wondered out loud why the Redskins are playing a T-Formation.

"They're ruining their biggest asset—Sammy Baugh," he said. "He's the second best football player in the league—Luckman's the best—and they're misusing him with a T-Formation. He can't set up his good pass plays and they lost his quick kicking."

Even the Redskins are apparently convinced of the futility of their own running attack from the T-Formation, and are gambling almost completely on the passes of Filchock and Baugh. At any rate, at the end of seven games, the records show that Andy Farkas has carried the ball only 12 times this season.

Old Fox Surprises 'Em

Clark Griffith Joins in Drive For New Washington Stadium

Clark C. Griffith, Washington Baseball Club President, was given a surprise birthday testimonial at the weekly luncheon of The Touchdown Club yesterday, and responded with an equally surprising plea for Touchdown members to back the proposed Stadium for Washington.

Griffiitth's 75th birthday was observed for the second ttime in as many days as Touchdown members tendered him a rising ovation while Executive Secretary James S. K. Magner led the capacity audience in an off-key vocal rendition of "Happy Birthday." He also was presented with a huge pink and white birthday cake by President Donald H. Adams, and The Touchdown Club's chef.

Griffith was accompanied to the speaker's table by his adopted son and the Washington club's Vice President Calvin Griffith, and by Secretary Eddie Eynon.

Jack Sharkey, former world's heavyweight boxing champion, and an outstanding USO worker in the present was, was another guest and entertained Touchdown members with his colorful anecdotes.

Griffith asked that the new Stadium be Federally owned and operated, and that its seating capacitty be restricted to 100,000. He declared that a larger Stadium would require unusual upkeep, and also would not provide as good a view of the activities as was desirable.

"It's true we own our own ball park, but just about every major league city has its ball park and a Municipal Stadium as well," Griffith emphasized. "I certainly think we should have a huge Stadium which would permit us to bring national attractions here."

Griffith also paid tribute to the grand work that is being done by The Mettropolitan Police Boys' Club, which had players and coaches of its football league teams present. Ray Garrity, president of The Metropolitan Police Boys' Club, was numbered among the guests of honor.

Bob Simmons, past president of The Touchdown Club, was called to the voice amplifier by Touchdown President Donald Adams to introduce Griffith, and expressed the hope that the committee designated by Judge K. M. Landis shortly to consider candidates for The Hall of Fame would not overlook the Old Fox. Griffiith, in turn, presented Simmons with the first slice of his birthday cake.

Ohio State Third

Army, Navy Continue Pace Atop Nation's Grid Heap

By Harold Claassen

New York, Nov. 21. (AP).—Navy moved into the second slot behind Army in today's Associated Press poll to determine the country's top ranking football team—thus adding the mythical National championship to the winner's booty in their clash at Baltimore December 2.

The Middies, by polishing off Purdue in a 32 to 0 struggle, moved up ahead of Ohio State and Randolph Field in the race to rank behind the Cadets who took first place for the fourth straight week.

Army garnered 65 1/3 of the 98 first place votes and piled up 889 points. Navy got only five ballots for first but wound up with 761 points.

Randolph Field, still the leader among the service teams, skidded to fourth place while Ohio State, the country's outstanding civilian aggregation, hung onto third.

The Buckeyes, currently the Big Te nleaders, can clinch or lose their title claims Saturday in their clash with Michigan at Columbus. The Wolverines, rated No. 6, annex the title if they win.

An all-collegiate top ten would have the same first three as the over-all poll, followed by Michigan, Southern California, Georgia Tech, Duke, Alabama, Tennessee and Notre Dame. The Irish crashed to eighteenth place in the composite tabulation.

A complete service ten would have Randolph Field, Bainbridge, Iowa Preflight, Fourth Air Force, Great Lakes, Camp Peary, El Toro, Calif., Marines, Norman, Okla., Navy, Second Rir Force and the North Carolina Preflight.

Leading teams, determined on a basis of 10 points for each first place vote, nine for second, eight for third, etc. (First-place votes in parenthesis):

TOP TEN
Army (65½)	889
Navy (5)	761
Ohio State (5)	726
Randolph Field (11½)	690
Bainbridge Naval (4½)	412
Michigan	392
Iowa Preflight (2)	316
Southern California (1)	242
Fourth Air Force (3)	184
Georgia Tech	141
SECOND TEN

11, Duke (1), 124; 12, Great Lakes, 79; 13, Alabama, 71; 14, Camp Peary, 63; 15, Tennessee, 62; 16, El Toro, Calif., Marines, 53; 17, Norman, Okla., Navy, 45; 18, Notre Dame, 40; 19, Second Air Force, 31; 20, North Carolina Preflight, 22.

Also rans: Yale, 19; Oklahoma A. & M., 18; Virginia, 8; Thrid Air Force, 8; Fort Pierre, 6; Wake Forest, 6; Mississippi, 5; Georgia, 3; Oklahoma, 3; North Carolina State, 1; North Carolina University, 1; Indiana, 1.

Va. Practices Running Plays For Yale Game

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 21.—Virginia's hour and a quarter practice this afternoon was in large measure devoted to polishing the running attack to be used in New Haven next Saturday when the Cavaliers hope to win over the undefeated Yale team.

Defenses to be used against the Elis were also set up during the the first part of the late afternoon workout. But Virginia will, in meeting Yale as in the first seven games of the season, rely on the time-honored theory that a good offense is the best defense.

Coach Frank Murray tried out an assortment of backs behind the first team line. Charlie Ellis, Allen Clay and Joe McCary all called signals under center, with John Duda, Lucien Burnett, Dick Davis, Bill Hickman, Frank Goodman, Bill Pickett and Frank Nazor all working in the cross of the T.

Virginia has relied on a standard defense in all of the games this season except the meeting with the strong North Carolina Navy Pre-Flight School. The Cavaliers have also tried, and with marked success, to reduce the scoring opportunities of the opposition by holding on to the ball as long as possible.

In consequence Virginia has, in seven games, run almost two offensive plays from scrimmage for every one run by her rivals. The exact count is 452 plays for the Cavaliers, 270 for the seven other teams. In rushing plays Virginia is ahead 400 to 192, but the opposing teams have passed 32 times more than have the Cavaliers.

Virginia has been able to gain an average net of 316 yards for each game played, while holding the opposition to an average of just 73 yards a game, rushing and passing.

Coach Murray and his backfield assistant, George McAfee, tried several backfield combinations today behind the first team line, looking for the best combination to be started against the Elis.

Virginia will practice on Lambeth Field here tomorrow and Thursday and will leave early Friday for New Hoven. There'll be no workout Mriday, for the Cavaliers won't reach New Haven in time for a preliminary drill in the Bowl. They'll be quartered in Yale dormitories Friday night.

Doug Dodson Is Injured At Pimlico

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Pimlico, Md., Nov. 21.—Jockey Douglas Dodson, leading rider at the meeting here, suffered a broken collarbone in a spill that marked the third race. Dodson was moving up boldly with A. J. Brady's Journeyman at the five-sixteenths pole when the 4-year-old appeared to slip sideways and went down, pinning Dodson underneath. The boy was taken to the local Bon Secours Hospital.

Dodson broke a collarbone during the early stages of the Garden State Park meeting last summer.

He has been doing the No. 1 riding for the Calumet Farm in Maryland this fall and had the mount on Pot O' Luck in that colt's smashing victory in the Pimlico Futurity last week. Dodson also has been piloting Twilight Tear in recent races.

Saxonian Triumphs

The race was won by Mrs. J. L. Moore's Saxonian, a $6.20 shot, in a test of a mile and 70 yards. J. P. Harris' Busy Man was second and Mrs. L. M. Carver's Brother Dear was third. The winner was clocked in 1:48 for the route.

Local stewards who have not been allowing objections in recent cases finally sustained a foul claim and placed Isadore Bieber's Pheecia, the winner, second behind L. Rabinawitz's Houlgate after the finish of the fourth race. J. W. Brown's Cy Dart remained in third position. Pheecia went to the front approaching the stretch and appeared to hold a straight course through the stretch. Jockey Ted Atkinson, on Houlgate, attempted to go through on the rail and seemed to have room but elected to snatch up and go to the outside of the leader, missing getting up by a neck margin. Atkinson claimed Apprentice B. Mills shut him off. The race was at a mile and 70 yards and Houlgate, after the disqualification, paid a $7.50 win mutuel.

Good Nite Wins First

B. A. Murphy's Good Nite was the easiest kind of a winner in the first race. Jockey Arnold Kirkland brought the daughter of Good Advice to the wire six lengths in front of the closest opposition in a cheap field of a dozen going a mile and a sixteenth. Mrs. M. H. Charles' Consignment was second with Bobanet Stable's Say Miss, practically left at the post in third position. Good Nite paid $11.20 and was clocked in 1:51.

Bleak, wind yweather kept the crowd down to 8000 and the track was in slow condition as the eight flat-race program got under way.

Those who backed the combination of Good Nite and Stormy Bill received a $74.10 mutuel in the daily double after the second event. Jockey Carson Kirk booted Stormy Bill, half of the Trainer C. Reynolds entry home a half length in advance of H. Quant's Gallant Son with M. Gilbert's Morgils Lad in third position. The winner clocked in 1:18 for the 6 furlongs, paid $15.60.

Crowley Released From Contract to Coach Grid Yanks

New York, Nov. 21 (AP).—Ted Collins, radioman and owner of the Boston Yanks, said tonight he had released Lieut. Comdr. James H. Crowley from his contract to become the peacetime coach of the Yanks in order that Crowley might accept the presidency of a newly formed pro football league.

At the same time, Collins said that Herb Kopf, presently coaching the Yanks, would become the permanent mentor.

Crowley was coach at Fordham until he entered the Navy. He coached the Sampson (N. Y.) Naval Base eleven this fall after his return from a tour of duty in the South Pacific.

Commodores Find Masc Everybody Is Happy

Bainbridge, Md., Nov. 21 (AP).—All was serene in the camp of the Bainbridge Naval Training Center Commodores today as the undefeated and untied football team prepared for the Camp Peary Pirates—Commie, the black mascot kitten, has returned.

The kitten was lost just before the team left for Camp Lejeune, N. C., where the Commodores won 33-6, but a frantic search failed to produce it. Commie finally was found in a station drill hall, sleeping beneath a radiator.

One Vote Over Nicholson

'Slats' Marion Rates Top With Boys in Press Box

By Jack Hand

New York, Nov. 21 (AP).—Martin (Mr. Shortstop) Marion of the World Champion St. Louis Cardinals today was named the most valuable player in the National League in 1944 by a margin of one vote over Bill Nicholson of the Chicago Cubs in the annual balloting of a 24-man committee of the Baseball Writers Association of America.

In the closest finish since the current vote tabulation system was adopted in 1938, the lean 6-02 infielder from Iva, S. C., picked up seven first-place votes to four for the Chicago slugger but the graduated point allotment closed the gap to make the final point total read Marion 190, Nicholson 189.

Fred (Dixie) Walker of Brooklyn, batting champion with an unofficial .357 mark, finished third with 145, nine points ahead of Stan Musial of St. Louis, who took top honors a year ago. Two pitchers, Bucky Walters of Cincinnati and Rookie Bill Voiselle of New York, tied for fifth at 107.

Ray Mueller of Cincinnati, who caught every one of the Reds' 155 games, was ranked next with 85, followed in the first 10 by Walker Cooper of St. Louis, 72; Mort Cooper of St. Louis 63, and Bob Elliott of Pittsburgh, 57.

Marion was the third successive Red Bird to capture the coveted award, following Musial in 1943 and M. Cooper in 1942—becoming the first shortstop to be honored in the history of the poll dating back to 1924.

Despite a batting average of only .269, Marion accounted for 64 runs batted in but it was his brilliant fielding which tabbed the geniel Southerner as the No. 1 man in the circuit.

Long arms and an instinctive sense of being in the right place at the right time turned sizzling liners and nasty-hopping bouncers into easy outs, prompting baseball men to compare him with the great Honus Wagner, one of baseball's immortals. Marty led the shortstops in fielding with an unofficial .971.

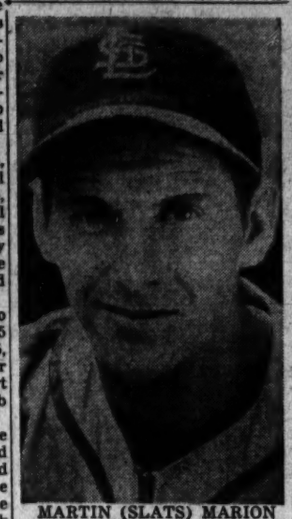

Outstanding in Series

Marion's World Series play when he was credited with being "the" difference between the Cards and Browns, justified the selections of the committee, headed by John M. Malaney of Boston, retiring president of the writers organization. It was the fifth year in the big show for the Cards' shortstop who came up from Rochester in 1940.

Much of the credit for the Cubs' rise from the cellar to the first division after a dismal start went to Nicholson who led in runs batted in with 120 and homers with 33, the first slugging "double" in history.

On the basis of 14 points for a first-place vote, nine for second, eight for third and so on down to one for tenth, the final totals of players receiving 10 or more points in addition to those named were:

Rip Sewell, Pittsburgh, 49; Babe Dahlgren, Piftsburgh, 33; Frank McCormick, Cincinnati, 32; Phil Cavarretta, Chicago, 27; Ray Sanders, St. Louis, 25; Mel Ott, New York, 20; Jim Tobin, Boston, 13; Johnny Hopp, St. Louis, and Ron Northey, Philadelphia, 10.

MARTIN (SLATS) MARION

For Service Game

You Can't Buy Any Tickets In Baltimore

Baltimore, Nov. 21 (U.P.).—The 30,000 or so tickets available to the public for the Navy-Army game at Baltimore, December 2 were sold out in slightly more than 24 hours, the Maryland State War Finance Committee disclosed today.

The committee which handled the war bond ticket sales announced that it had received enough applications to cover the entire allotment.

"We already have received sufficient applications to use up the entire allotted number of tickets available to war bond buyers," the announcement said. "It is useless to send in any more applications. Those received from now on will be returned."

The war-bond ticket sales were restricted to residents of Baltimore and a 10-mile radius of the city. They went on sale yesterday morning and receipts for purchase of a bond in the Sixth War Loan were necessary to apply for the tickets, which were priced at $4.80 each.

The other tickets for the game, some 40,000, were divided between the Navy and Army athletic departments and went to the 18,000 and more Annapolis residents who had applied for seats to the game when it still was scheduled to be played in Annapolis.

The tickets allotted to Navy and Army will go only to midshipmen, cadets and members of the Navy and Army athletic associations. No applications from the public have been, or will be, accepted.

Meanwhile, at Washington, Senator David I. Walsh (D., Mass.) disclosed in the Senate that Senators and members of the House of Representatives were eligible to buy four tickets each from the Navy for the game "as honorary members of the Navy Athletic Association. The 10-mile rule imposed on the public sale does not apply to the members of either the Army or Navy Athletic Association.

Congressmen to Get 4 Army-Navy Tickets Each

Congressmen got the good news yesterday—they'll be allowed four tickets apiece for the Army-Navy football game December 2 at Baltimore.

They'll have to buy them, however. And they must get their applications in by tomorrow evening, the Associated Press reported, but purchase of a war bond is not required.

For the general public tickets are being restricted to applicants living within 10 miles of Baltimore, but that doesn't apply to Senators and Representatives. They are honorary members of the Naval Academy Athletic Association.

The ticket quota, announced in the Senate by Senator Walsh (D., Mass.), Chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee, means 2,124 tickets have been earmarked for Congressmen.

Two Colorful Rivals Renew Classic Feud

Miami, Fla., Nov. 21. (AP).—Once-beaten Georgia Tech and twice-defeated Tulsa, which staged a thrilling football show in the Sugar Bowl at New Orleans last New Year's Day, will be matched again in the Orange Bowl January 1.

President Van C. Kussrow of the Orange Bowl committee, announced the signing of Georgia Tech this afternoon and followed up tonight with confirmation that Tulsa had accepted a bid.

Tech Won Last Year

The Engineers whipped Tulsa, 20 to 18, with a last-period touchdown last January 1 in the most exciting battle of the Sugar Bowl series. The classic encounter had a lot to do with the selection of the same two teams for the Orange Bowl, which goes in for color and sensations rather than perfect records.

Georgia Tech has piled up 183 points against 54 in defeating seven out of eight 1944 opponents. The Rambling Wreck lost only to Duke, in a major upset.

Still to be played, however, are games with rebounding Notre Dame and an up-and-coming Georgia team.

Tulsa Bowl Veterans

Tulsa has lost two high-scoring engagements, to Oklahoma A. and M. and to the Iowa Seahawks, but has scored 270 points against 112. The Golden Tornado will be favored to whip Arkansas Thursday and the University of Miami in an appearance at the Orange Bowl Stadium, December 1.

It will be the third Bowl appearance in consecutive years for Georgia Tech and the fourth for Tulsa.

Tech lost to Texas in the Cotton Bowl of 1943. Tulsa defeated Texas Tech in the Sun Bowl game of 1942, then lost to Tennessee in the 1943 Sugar Bowl.

W. A. Alexander, dean of the Southeastern Conference coaches, has the help of Naval trainees on the Georgia Tech eleven. Coach Henry Frnka has an all-civilian squad at Tulsa.

Yale Not Interested In Postseason Game

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 21 (U.P.). Yale's undefeated football team is not interested in any postseason bowl games.

Athletic Director Odgen Miller made that clear today when he said that Yale had not been invited to any bowl games and that even if such an invitation was received it would be turned down because there is a school ruling against it.

'Skins, Giants Pin Hopes on Bears, Rams

Battered, bruised and beaten Sunday by the Eagles for the first time this year in league play, the Redskins resumed drills yesterday in preparation for the Boston Yanks' invasion this weekend.

Although a letdown may be expected against the weak Yanks, who have won only two games this year, both over the Brooklyn Tigers, the Redskins cannot claim a lack of incentive despite the weakness of the opposition. A loss would just about eliminate the Redskins' present slim chances of retaining their Eastern Division titular honors.

The Redskins still have a home-and-home series with the Giants following Sunday's Yankee game. A double-tripmph over the Giants, plus a defeat for the Eagles against either the Bears or Rams, would give the 'Skins the title again and put them in the playoffs. The 'Skins are pretty well conceding the Eagles a victory over the Brooklyn Tigers in the Philadelphians' third remaining game. Of course, if the Eagles refuse to lose the Redskins cannot win regardless.

The Giants, too, who surprised by whipping Green Bay, 24-0, Sunday in spectacular style, are in the same boat with the Redskins. They must beat the Tigers Sunday and take two from the 'Skins, meanwhile hoping someone knocks off the Eagles, before they get into the playoff. If the Redskins and Giants split their two games the Eagles can drop one and still capture the title in the East. Getting the Eagles whipped appears to be the main problem just now. Both the Redskins and Giants tied and lost to the (Greasy) Neale's magicians, leaving it up to either Rams or Bears . . . AL COSTELLO.

Baltimore Site Of Harrier Meet Tomorrow

Baltimore, Nov. 21 (AP).—The National AAU cross-country championships will be held in Clifton Park on Thanksgiving Day with titles at stake in the National Scholastic, South Atlantic Collegiate and the National Senior Divisions.

The program will open at 11 a. m. with the schoolboys competing in a 2-mile run. Baltimore hopefuls will be led by Bob Judy, Forest Park ace, who holds the Maryland scholastic title.

Gallaudet College of Washington is the defending team champion in the 4-mile South Atlantic Collegiate test. Strong opposition is expected this year from New York University and University of Virginia. The feature event is the National Senior championship 10,000-meter test. The large and colorful field is headed by Bill Hulse, defending champion. A New York Athletic Club runner, Hulse now is in the Navy.

A serious threat will be the Alaska potato farmer, Mainhardt Bredt, who is flying here for the championships.

Amateur Card Loses Smithson; Hand Injured

Matchmaker Billy Blake last night announced that an injured hand will preclude the possibility of the Apollo Club's Gilly Smithson going through with his five-round boxing feature with the Merrick Club's Herbie Jones on the D. C. Veterans of Foreign Wars benefit amateur boxing carnival at Turner's Arena Friday night.

However, Blake entertains high hopes of matching the handsome and crowd pleasing Jones with Eddie Funk, highly regarded feather-weight from the Pete's A. C., and hopes to close this event today.

Meanwhile, Blake is bringing back through popular demand two lightning fast flyweights in George Fuller and Eddie Vitro, both of the Merrick Club, in a three-round number. These lads stole the show on the VFW card at Griffith Stadium last September, and are expected to be equally as pleasing in this return battle.

A five-round lightweight number in which Lloyd Habron, St. Mary's Club, engages Harry Ismer, Apollo A. C., also should provide its moments, while a total of five bouts of five rounds and five more of three will complete the show.

Tickets for this outstanding amateur show are on sale at Turner's Arena, and are popularly priced.

Cagers Are Busy

Coach John Lawther of Penn State is drilling his basketball candidates daily in preparation for the forthcoming season.

Rip Collins Top Eastern Player

Utica, N. Y., Nov. 21 (AP).—James (Ripper) Collins, 40-year-old playing manager who hit .396 for the Albany Senators last year, has been voted the Eastern League's most valuable player for 1944, by the baseball writers about the league.

Collins, veteran of three world series as a big leaguer, led the Eastern League in batting, although it has been 21 years since he quit his job in a coal mine at Nanty Glo, Pa., to start his baseball career.

Collins was first baseman for the St. Louis Cardinals for six years and played two more with the Chicago Cubs before dropping back to the Pacific Coast League in 1939. After two years with Los Angeles, he came back up to the Pittsburgh Pirates in 1941, and the next year took over the Albany managership.

PACIFIC NET SHOW—Col. Roy M. Gulick, USMC, of Doylestown, Pa., thanks Bobby Riggs, tennis star now a navy specialist 2nd class, for giving an exhibition before leatherneck tennis fans at Pearl Harbor Marine barracks.

Army's Bob Onge Named Outstanding Lineman of Week

By Ted Meier

New York, Nov. 21 (AP).—Robert J. St. Onge, center on Army's high flying point a minute football team, won honors today as the outstanding lineman of the week in the eighth Associated Press poll.

A converted halfback, St. Onge, a 180-pounder from New York City (Forest Hills), tore the middle of the Pennsylvania line apart as the West Pointers piled up a 62 to 7 score. His blocking drew compliments from his coach, Lieut. Col. Earl Blaik.

"I consider him one of the most improved players on the team," declared Blaik, "I would say he is responsible for more than a reasonable share of our success to date."

Considering that the unbeaten and untied Cadets have won eight in a row and are rated the No. 1 team in the country, this is high praise indeed.

John Cooke, Texas Christian virtually won the Southwest Conference title for the Horned Frogs by blocking two consecutive Texas punts that defeated the Longhorns. Coach D. X. Bible of Texas, asserted "he gave us trouble all the time."

Another tackle, Clarence Esser of Wisconsin, was a standout at Ann Arbor as the Badgers held Michigan to a 14-0 victory. He recovered two Wolverine fumbles in addition to intercepting a forward pass and throwing back Michigan thrusts.

Paul Walker, Yale end, and Tommy Smith, Eli guard, performed brilliantly against North Carolina. Said Howie Odell, Yale coach, "Walker played the kind of game (against North Carolina) he is capable of and when he does that there is none better anywhere. As for Smith, nobody is more valuable to our team."

Tackle Don Whitmire of Navy, played his usual sterling game against Purdue while Bobby Folsom, Southern Methodist end and halfback, intercepted five Arkansas aerials, running one back 75 yards for the winning touchdown. He played end on offense and halfback on defense.

Although his team was beaten the terrific defensive play of Roger Harding, California center, brought the assertion from Jeff Cravath, Southern California coach, that Harding was the best center on the Pacific Coast.

Jim Schwabenland, 17-year-old substitute USC guard, got the thrill every lineman seeks by intercepting a California pass and running 18 yards for a touchdown.

Other outstanding linemen included:

Ends—Doc Acocella, Syracuse; Leon Bramlett, Navy; Paul Robeson, Jr., Cornell.

Tackles—Don Whitmire, Navy; Clyde Flowers, Texas Christian; Monte Moncrieff, Texas Aggies; Don Winslow, Iowa.

Guards—H. J. Nichols, Rice; Alex Kapter, Iowa Preflight; Jack Fathauer, Iowa State; Bill Hackett, Ohio State; Ralph Serpico, Illinois.

Centers—Don Paul, UCLA; Jack Sasche, Texas; Fritz Alexander, Dartmouth, and Vaughn Mancha, Alabama.

Lawyer Is Coach

Attorney Paul Campbell, 1930 Eastern 155-pound champion, will coach the Penn State wrestlers again this winter.

A Real Veteran

The forthcoming season will be Leo Houck's 23d as head coach of boxing at Penn State.

William & Mary In Light Drill for Tuurkey Day Tilt

Williamsburg, Va., Nov. 21 (AP).—William and Mary College continued light workouts today for the season's last tussle Thanksgiving Day with the University of Richmond in the capital. The Indians returned none the wrose for wear after the 26 to 0 defeat handed Virginia Miltary Institute at Portsmouth last Saturday.

Saturday's victory gave the Tribe its first Southern Conference win in three starts and their first decision over a Sate college football eleven this year. McCray's charges must win over the Spiders Thanksgiving Day if they expect to tie Virginia for the State championship this year.

Tom Mikula, ace Indian blocking back, saw little action against VMI because of an injury suffered in the game with the University of North Carolina, but he is expected to be in the line-up against Richmond. Chester Mackiewicz, recently off the casualty list, marked his return b yscoring 20 points against the Keydets. He also will be in action against the Pittmen.

WRESTLER AT REINS—Joe Lynam, American wrestler, now an Army technical sergeant, works out Mark Robert, a trotter, at a harness track at Sydney, N. S. W.

Jack Sharkey Refs Baxter-Savoldi Mat Clash at Turner's

Jack Sharkey, former world's heavyweight boxing king, will perform as referee tonight on the Turner Arena wrestling card, headlined by the return clash between Laverne Baxter and Angelo Savoldi.

This will be Sharkey's first appearance before Washington fans since his return from the North African and Italian war fronts, where he entertained troops as a member of a USO group.

The Baxter-Savoldi clash tops the classiest mat array of the year. Patrick O'Connor is meeting John Vansky, and the Masked Commando faces Jack Steele. Dutch Rohde meets Leo/Numa and Lou Farino is paired with Charleu Lupkie in the balance of the supporting encounters.

Penn State Soccer Team Meets Cornell Saturday

State College.—After playing their first five games at home, Bill Jeffrey's Penn State soccer team go to Ithaca, N. Y., Saturday to meet Cornell in the season's first match on foreign soil.

The Cornel-Penn State series started in 1920, but noly four games have been played since. The Lions won two, and the other two were ties. Last year, the two teams battled to a 2-2 deadlock.

Riley Smith Sees College Gridders Equaling Pro

Gainesville, Ga., Nov. 21 (AP).—Postwar college football teams, bolstered by returning servicemen, will rank with pro elevens in ability, Lieut. Riley Smith, former All-America quarterback from Alabama.

Smith, assigned to the Naval Air Technical Training Center here, also predicted expansion of pro football, with perhaps a leagu operating in the South.

Solution to Yesterday's Puzzle

Takoma Park To Install 2 More Sirens

Placement of two OCD fire sirens in different sections of Takoma Park, Md., to be hooked up with the siren at the Takoma Park Volunteer Fire Department, has been approved by Mayor Oliver W. Youngblood and the Town Council, it was announced yesterday.

The request was made, according to Chief Dewey Hayes, because during the winter months many of the volunteer firemen who live some distance from the firehouse cannot hear the main siren when it blows for alarms. He pointed out that atmospheric conditions and storm windows on the homes prevent the siren from being heard.

One siren, already erected on the Suburban National Bank, Carroll and Willow aves., will remain there. The other, Hayes said, will probably be erected in the vicinity of Flower ave. and Anne st.

The council appointed Luther Cramer a full-time town policeman due to the vacancy caused by the resignation of Charles Seek. Cramer was previously appointed on a part-time basis.

It also voted to advertise for bids for construction of a storm sewer on Jackson ave., from Boyd ave., to Sligo Parkway. The bids will be opened December 7.

Farmer Uses Hedgerows To Halt Soil Erosion

Smithton, Ill.—Shrewd and lanky W. W. Moeser, who owns a 200-acre farm is taking one of the simple steps to arrest soil erosion which any farmer can follow. Instead of plowing his fields to the fence posts or the field lines, as is common practice, Moeser leaves a wide hedgerow on the margins.

This solid row of shrubs or other vegetation not only holds the soil in place, but also provides cover for game and nesting places for insect-eating birds.

Arlingtonians Ask Action On Postoffice

"Immediae and urgent action" on a plan to enlarge the Arlington postoffice to accommodate the needs of a population of 250,000 was recommended yesterday by the Arlington Chamber of Commerce.

In a letter to Walter S. Myers, Fourth Assistant Postmaster General, the Arlington Chamber urged that "plans be made to enlarge, in the immediate future, the existing postoffice building in order to serve not only the present but the future needs of the community."

The chamber's appeal was based on a survey of Arlington's postal facilities by a special chamber committee.

Copies of the recommendations were sent also to Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) and to Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.). The letter said the postoffice business, as well as Arlington's population, have trebled since the present postoffice building was occupied in 1937.

With the tremendous increase in business, and the necessity for a larger operating personnel, "The inadequacy of the present floorspace would necessarily result in a lessening of the efficiency of the office," it was stated. However, the chamber letter went on to declare that present personnel is "rendering as good a service as could be expected in the circumstances."

Also recommended by the Chamber was installation of a conveyor in the present postoffice building to lift heavy bags of mail and parcel post packages from the basement to the first floor.

Seal Sale to Start

Participation by children in all Arlington County public schools in the annual tuberculosis seal sale which opens Monday has been announced by Dr. B. H. Jarman, chairman of the School Health Committee of the Arlington Tuberculosis Association. The children will distribute educational literature, according to plans of the committee, while posters and library book marks will go to all schools. Members of the committee in addition to Dr. Jarman, are Miss Lena Wolf, Miss Florence Gravatte and Mrs. Norma H. Davies.

Montgomery Road Inspector Is Appointed

John S. Mathews, 41, of 4523 Avondale st., Bethesda, yesterday was appointed chief road inspector for the county by the Montgomery County commissioners meeting in Rockville.

Recommended for the position, which pays $2700 a year, by Sterling R. Maddox, county engineer, Mathews will assume the duties December 1, succeeding Francis O. Day, resigned. Educated at Penn State College, Mathews was formerly with the U. S. Engineers Office and worked on Federal projects in Alaska and Puerto Rico.

The board accepted the resignation of Dr. C. S. Wilbanks as veterinarian for Montgomery County in cooperation with the Livestock Sanitary Service and the U. S. Bureau of Animal Industry effective November 30. Dr. Wilbanks said he will engage in practice of veterinary medicine in the county. Work will be carried on under the supervision of Dr. A. L. Breuckner, director of the service, who will make a recommendation to fill the vacancy.

Police Clerk Appointed

Due to the resignation of Roland Banks, Rockville, the board appointed R. S. Young, Boyds, a desk clerk at the Rockville police station at a salary of $145 a month beginning December 1.

It appointed Roy Ray, Rockville, an "emergency policeman" at $175 a month upon the resignation of Edwin L. Henley.

J. Forest Walker, clerk and treasurer of the board, was instructed to notify all fire departments in the county under special taxing areas to file their annual audits with the county commissioners. It was pointed out that some departments have failed to file.

Rezoning Hearings Set

Public hearings for rezoning petitions were set by the board for December 27 from to 2 to 3 p. m. in the hearing room of the Liquor Dispensing Building, Silver Spring.

Petitions include that of Garland W. Wolfe for reclassification from residential "A" to commercial "D" a lot in Block D in the Building Supply Co.'s addition to Silver Spring. Another was filed by James W. Gill, attorney for the owner, requesting rezoning from residential "A" to commercial "D" of two lots in the same section.

A third petition filed by Elisha Hanson, attorney for the owner, asks for the same rezoning of a lot in Detrick's subdivision, Kensington. Petitions for rezoning filed within the last month total 25, the most in many years.

All resolutions adopted by the Montgomery County Civic Federation regarding zoning recommendations were tabled.

Montgomery 16% Over Top In War Fund

Montgomery County has passed its Community War Fund quota of $97,000 by 16 per cent, Walter P. Elliott, county campaign chairman, announced last night.

With additional gifts coming in daily the goal has been oversubscribed by approximately $16,000, Elliott said, explaining that every one of the eight areas into which the county was divided for the campaign has gone over its quota.

"Montgomery County has thus protected the programs of its welfare, health and recreation needs as well as assuming its share in the responsibility of assisting our allies and contributing to the needs of our service men and women at home and abroad," declared J. Harry Welch, president of the Montgomery County Community Chest and Council.

Praising the work of every chairman, captain and worker, Elliott said that these persons and contributors have made a "great united effort in this common objective." He especially paid tribute to the eight Negro groups which worked in different parts of the county.

Mrs. Baker Heads Drive

Mrs. Paul Hamilton Baker, former chairman of the Silver Spring Red Cross Canteen Unit and leader of several civic drives, has undertaken the chairmanship of the campaign to collect used clothing in Silver Spring for Polish relief.

Cooperating with Countess Marja Teresa Lasoka and other Polish women in exile, Mrs. Baker has established the following receiving stations where residents may bring their contributions:

The Silver and Seco theaters, Peoples drug stores, Safeway stores, Suburban National Band, all public schools, St. Michael's Catholic school and the Chevrolet garage at Second ave. and Colesville rd.

Ten to Be Inducted

Ten registrants from Montgomery County Selective Service Board, No. 2, Silver Spring, will be inducted into service today.

They are: Jerry R. Hahn, George H. Parkman, jr., George Wesley Heflin, Irving M. Lang, James C. Steidel, John O. Edwards, William H. Ern, Carl Orelup, George W. Johnson and George E. Still.

Poplar Bluff, Mo. (AP).—R. M. Wolpers heard a commotion in his lily garden and found a large bullfrog with a full grown blackbird halfway down its throat. He rescued the bird and turned it loose.

Ban Smoking in Cars

San Diego, Calif. (UP).—San Diego s bus and streetcar riders will have to forgo the pleasure of that before-and-after-work smoke while entrained on any public transportation beginning April 28, when a new antismoke city ordinance becomes effective.

Falls Church To Hear Talk By Maj. Craig

Arlington-Fairfax Bureau, The Post, 1630 No. Buchanan St. Tel. CH. 3239.

Maj. John D. Craig, inventor of the underwater movie camera and author of "Danger Is My Business," will give an illustrated lecture for the benefit of the Falls Church P-T A general fund, at the Madison Elementary School tomorrow and Friday nights at 8 o'clock.

Major Craig, who now lives with his wife and daughter in Falls Church, has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for his photographic work over combat areas. He entered the Army Air Forces in 1942 and participated in 38 missions in Tunisia, Sicily and Italy.

Turner Herd Ahead

Mark Turner, Fairfax County dairyman, was listed as having both the highest herd and the highest cow in milk production in tests conducted in October by the Dairy Herd Improvement Association No. 2, with Paul B. Laprade as tester.

Dairy association averages were 6317 pounds of milk and 25.93 pounds of butter. The five high herds in milk were those of Mark Turner, B. F. Salsbury, Paul Kincheloe, Johnson & Wimsatt and Granvillle Berry.

Five high cows in milk production were owned by Mark Turner, Johnson & Wimsatt and Mrs. Economos, with the first two dairymen each taking two places.

Five high herds in butterfat were B. F. Salsbury, Paul Kincheloe, Mark Turner, Granville Berry and C. T. Rice.

Five high cows in butterfat were owned by A. L. Leigh, Paul Kincheloe, D. O. Hileman, W. I. Bowman and Mark Turner.

Service Unit For Veterans At Alexandria

Alexandria Bureau of The Post. 110 North St. Asaph St., Temple 6538.

Appointment of a Veterans' Service Committee for the city of Alexandria under provision of the Retraining and Reemployment Administration was announced yesterday by Carter W. Friend, manager of the United States Employment Service, 301 King st., where headquarters for the new group has been established.

The members, including the three reemployment committeemen of the Alexandria Selective Service Board and the veterans' employment representative of the USES, are: Martin E. Greene, chairman; Dr. Roy H. Case, the Rev. Norman Roberts of the Methodist Protestant Church, and William C. DuVal of the USES.

The new veterans' information center at the USES office is under the supervision of DuVal and is open from 8:30 a. m. to 5 p. m. every day except Sunday. If the demand for assistance increases, the committee will consider keeping the center open at night and on Sundays, DuVal said. The telephone number is Alexandria 4224.

According to Greene, who is also business manager of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce, the new veterans' service committee will coordinate its activities under the Virginia veterans' assistance and postwar employment program with the activities of the Alexandria citizens postwar employment committee which is now being organized.

A liaison is maintained by Greene's committee with public and private agencies, veterans' groups and other organizations in Alexandria which now serve veterans and their families. In addition, up-to-date information regarding the services available to veterans and their families in the District of Columbia may also be obtained at the center in Alexandria, Greene said.

Army Air Forces combat cameramen on bombing missions have shot down three Messerschmitts, one Focke-Wulf and three Zeros, and accounted for a Japanese tanker, according to the War Department.

Mary Haworth's Mail

In View of Husband Shortage, Girl, 32, Thinks of Marrying Tedious but Devoted Suitor; Might She Learn to Love Him Later?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am engaged to a man 35 years old, whom I know loves me very much. I, on the other hand, have never had more than a mild interest in him; but after going out with him for six months,—for lack of other dates,—I accepted him when he proposed. There is a shortage of men in our community, I am 32 years old and have never been a popular girl, and, also, I am being constantly reminded by my family that it is better to marry than be single.

I am considered fairly intelligent, whilst he is more on the dull side, mentally; and his physical appearance leaves much to be desired. Aside from the physical love he can give me,—which any normal woman desires,—I find him quite boring. Once, when I intimated breaking the engagement, he said it would practically kill him if that should happen.

Do you think there is any possibility of a marriage between us working out? I do not wish to be unkind to him; nor would I want to remain in single blessedness, which might happen if I jilted him. I am hoping that if we marry, I might learn to love him as I should. I do not think I'm in love with him. If I were, I would desire his company more than I do; and would be able to overlook little things about him that annoy me. The more I try to foresee the future, the more confused I get. What is your advice? J. W.

Married Love
A Noonday Bond

DEAR J. W.: Mutual romantic love to start with is a beautiful plank in the platform of marriage, but not indispensable to a fine and deeply cherished life partnership, I think. Married love, in any case, is a steadfast feeling of reliable, helpful interdependence, on the part of both,—which is as different from romantic ardor as the sunlight of noonday is different from rosy candle light. And this married love either develops from the experience of living together, or it doesn't;—but the existence of mutually exciting sweetheart sentiments to begin with, is no guarantee that the union will be permanently rewarding.

What makes good marriage is good character, on the part of both husband and wife,—and by good character, we mean the ability, consistently demonstrated, to abide by high principles of behavior in every aspect of their relationship. Compared to this absolutely necessary first requirement, other supporting elements are rather incidental, because only the soil of loyal complete trustworthiness can be counted on to yield an abundant harvest of married contentment.

Square Decision
With These Points

THUS, you might marry this man and find much happiness with him, provided: 1. That both of you are persons of invulnerable character and reasonable disposition. 2. That, having made the choice, you "close the valves of your attention like stone," and never thereafter entertain a moment's forward looking dubiety or backward looking regret; nor compare him unfavorably in word or thought, with other women's husbands.

3. That you quash the impulse to feel superior to him, when it arises, by gratefully remembering that he made a fuller life possible for you; and resolving, in appreciation, to use your greater gifts so graciously and competently on his behalf that he will constantly marvel at his luck in winning you. 4. That you have, as a basis for social companionship, some common interests, such as like religion, mutual friends and kindred tastes in recreation. And finally, 5. That he is not physically repugnant to you. In conclusion, please understand, I am not encouraging you to marry him. The decision is for you to make. But I hope these comments will help to clear your mind and bring a definite conclusion. M. H.

Cooking School for Brides Opens Monday

You're a service wife, you say, who married "your man" just before he entered the service and went away? Or perhaps you've married him since he joined the ranks? Maybe you're engaged, and as soon as your Romeo returns you'll be his bride. If you're a newly wed, you probably haven't established a record as a homemaker. You may not even have a home of your own while your man is away—but you will have when he comes home. It is then that you will want to be able to cook him nourishing, palatable and attractive food that he has so missed while away from home. Then you will want to take your place as an efficient and charming hostess.

Well, girls, you're going to have the chance to learn how to cook and serve meals, and be taught by home economists in the laboratories of the local high schools. You're going to be a grown-up school girl and have this opportunity because of the George-Dean Act passed in June, 1936, which made funds available for the education of adults. This provision includes the home economics departments of public schools, thus enabling them to include grown-ups in the curriculum.

Home Economics Guidance

Under the direction of Mrs. Ola Day Rush, head of the home economics department, District of Columbia Schools, and Mrs. Mabel Martin, assistant in adult homemaking, these courses will get under way Monday, November 27.

The course will include ten lessons, two a week, to be held from 7 to 9 p. m. on Mondays and Wednesdays at Central High School located at 13th and Clifton sts. nw. and McKinley High School located at Second and T sts, n.e. The registration fee is $5, this amount to cover the cost of the food and the mimeographing of the "Bride's Cook Book," compiled from the 10 lessons. The instruction is free as the teachers are paid by the authority of the George-Dean Act, out of funds appropriated for Adult Education.

First Come, First Served

Since facilities will permit only 40 enrollees, it will be a case of first come first served. So call Mrs. Rush's office and make arrangements to enroll. The telephone is National 6000, Extension 841, hours, 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.

The course is planned to include the how's and why's in preparation of foods used for family meals, buffets and all the times when a young homemaker needs to know how to prepare and serve food that will establish her as a homemaker.

I for one, mean to look in on these classes, as do several other home economists who think this is the answer to the young woman's prayers.

Nation's Top 'Names' View Opera Opening

Washington society turned out in full force for last night's formal opening of the grand opera season, with the list of boxholders rivaling in prestige that published for New York's traditionally swish Metropolitan opening next Monday.

It was a gala occasion for committee members, who have worked long and arduously to make the opening a success, and their most ambitious hopes were realized as box after box was occupied before the overture began.

Mrs. Roosevelt was in the throng that applauded the presentation of "Il Trovatore," with Giovanni Martinelli singing the leading role.

Cornelius Vanderbilt Guest

Cornelius Vanderbilt was there as guest of Mrs. John B. Morgan. His mother, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, dowager society-queen and opera patroness, will entertain in box 3 at the Met opening in New York. Mrs. Morgan's other guests included the Colombian Ambassador, Dr. Gabriel Turbay; Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Holdredge, Mrs. Crosby Miller, Lieut. and Mrs. Robert Schenck, Mrs. Igor Cassini and Col. Thomas Du Bose.

Admiral Sir John Somerville occupied a box as did other Britishers, including Air Commodore and Mrs. Douglas L. Blackford, Comdr. and Mrs. E. L. Rebbeck and Squadron Leader William Roxburgh. The British Embassy's box was occupied by staff members, as was the one held by the Netherlands and Cuban embassies.

Thurman Arnolds Attend

There as guests of Col. and Mrs. Robert Davis were Judge and Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Mrs. Paul Greenhalge and Paul Bartlett. With Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja were Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Hatch and Mr. and Mrs. Donald Jones.

Other boxholders present included Mrs. William Fahnestock, Mme. Olga Morosoff, Mrs. Andrea Kirsten, Mr. and Mrs. Louis H. LaMotte, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Smith, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. George Lull, Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Huntington, Mrs. Sutherland Mayo, Mrs. John R. Drexel, Mrs. Kelvin Vanderlip and Ernest May.

Also Miss Cornelia Bowie, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Alan Van Clief, Representative Ward Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Waters, Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, Mr. and Mrs. William L. Batt, Mr. and Mrs. Hudson Chandler, Mrs. Vivian Dewitt, Maj. and Mrs. Joseph Byron Mauldin, Mrs. Walter Koch, McDonald Smith and Dr. B. J. Slingenberg.

Powells Entertain

Mr. and Mrs. W. Royce Powell entertained for Mrs. Lawrence Snell, Ralph Hill Conkey and Capt. William Hibbs, USN.

After the performance, Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim were hosts at a large reception in honor of Martinelli and other artists, including Gertrude Ribla, New York Civic Opera Company; Alexander Sved, Metropolitan; Georgianna Bourdon, Chicago Opera, and Nina Ruisi, Philadelphia Opera Company.

Mrs. Gatling Will Be Wedded

Mr. and Mrs. Bartholomew Moore Gatling, Raleigh, N. C., and this city, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Mrs. Louis Crudup Gatling, to Lieut. Ferdinand Roebling White, AUS, son of Mr. and Mrs. William T. White, Hill Top, Princeton, N. J.

The prospective bride, a member of Washington Junior League, attended St. Mary's College, University of North Carolina, and studied languages in San Juan, Puerto Rico. She is a member of distinguished families, being descended from John and William Gatling, members of the London Company who settled Jamestown, Va., in 1632, and is a great-granddaughter of Bartholomew Figures Moore, Attorney General of North Carolina in 1848.

On her maternal side, Mrs. Gatling is a granddaughter of Ann Hudson Van Valkenburg, descendant of Hendrick Hudson and Lawrence Van Valkenburg, first white settlers of Syracuse County, N. Y.

Lieutenant White attended St. Mark's School and Princeton University and is now stationed here. He is a former MFH Stony Brook Hunt and is a member of Princeton University Cottage Club, the Master of Foxhounds Association of America and other well-known sportsman clubs.

Dr. Castro, Wife Honored At Luncheon

Norman Armour, acting director of the Office of American Republic Affairs, Department of State, was host at a luncheon at Blair House yesterday honoring the retiring Ambassador of El Salvador, Dr. Hector D. Castro, and Senora de Castro.

Ensign William Eldred Jackson, USNR, and Mrs. Jackson entertained at a small cocktail party yesterday in their Georgetown apartment honoring her parents, Col. and Mrs. Archibald Roosevelt.

Mrs. Lowell J. Bradford was a luncheon hostess yesterday at Pierre's, when she entertained in honor of Mrs. Frederick A. Marsteller. Guests included Miss Patricia Uline Hill, Mrs. James O'Grady, Miss Mary Ellen Degnan, Miss Achsah Dorsey, Miss Betty Ann Swagart, Mrs. Harry Swagart and Miss Caroline Wadden.

Ralph A. McKee will entertain at a cocktail party Thursday afternoon in honor of Lieut. Paul Woodward, Santa Barbara, Calif., who will leave soon for station in Honolulu.

Mrs. Walter Franc, Columbus, Ohio, formerly of Washington, is spending several days at the Shoreham Hotel.

Capt. Rushmore Patterson, AUS, and Mrs. Patterson are in New York, where they are guests at Hampshire House.

Town Talk—

Friends, Work With Nurses' Aides Engross Mrs. Armistead Peter While He's in Pacific

By Eva Hinton

IT is a long leap from a chicken farm in New England to a battleship and Leyte Island, but it's one which Lieut. Comdr. Armistead Peter has taken in his stride. It is part of the American gift for beating plowshares into swords when need arises.

Mrs. Peter was sharing the latest news of her husband and some very interesting snapshots with a few old friends who dropped by the other late afternoon. Whatever time she has left from her regular job as captain of nurses aides at Georgetown Hospital, Mrs. Peter gives to keeping touch with her friends as the very pleasantest form of relaxation.

"Nurses aides and more nurses aides are needed," says Mrs. Peter, "especially with the winter sick-list in prospect." The Red Cross sends out a special plea to women who have trained as nurses aides and who are now inactive, a plea that they come back to duty. New nurses aides are badly needed too, and a class for them opens at Walsh House, 2020 Massachusetts ave. November 27. Hours are 9 to 12, Monday through Friday mornings.

After about 3½ weeks of class work pupils will complete the course with active hospital training. The class will be for those giving day hours only. The night list is full, at least for the time being. Can it be that women who have regular daytime jobs are more generous of their time to volunteer war-work than those of us known as "housewives."

If you are a housewife or can give day hours take up the challenge and register at the Nurses Aide office in the DAR building at 17th and D sts., telephone REpublic 8300 ext. 291.

STOPPING by to see Mrs. Peter that afternoon was Mrs. Theodore Wilkinson, wife of the admiral, who share her hostess enthusiasm for nurses' aide work. Pretty Ann Wilkinson accompanied her mother as Anne Peter, daughter of the house, had asked in a few of her own friends.

The latter Anne is working hard at a secretarial course to fit herself for a war job and meantime pinch-hits very handily in the kitchen. Her father, before he went to sea, was a great admirer of her talent at cooking.

In admiration of her father's talent, young Anne has included in his Christmas box a miniature set of water colors in hopes that he might find time occasionally for some of his beautiful sketches.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Herbert Seymour Eoward came with petite, blond Maisie, who holds down a job with the British Supply Mission, and Mrs. Clarence Aspinwall chatted with her daughter-in-law, charming Mrs. Blair Lee.

Handsome Mrs. Patrick Hurley wore a tiny hat with a big, pink rose atop, and Mrs. John Creighton's becoming hat was a choux of pale blue velvet. A hat with a purpose was worn by Mrs. Nathan Wyeth who looked smart and neat in her AWVS uniform after a long lay at headquarters.

Charming Mrs. Paul Bartlett, mother of Mrs. Peter, made her corner the most popular one in the room. Chatting with her were Rear Admiral and Mrs. Paul Bastedo and Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Glover. Also present were Buzzy Hewes, Clarence Aspinwall, Nathan Wyeth, Capt. John Creighton, USN, and Maj. Andrew Wiley and Capt. Ralph Jenkins of the Marine Corps.

MRS. JAMES FORRESTAL made a great hit with our good neighbors in the South on her recent visit to Brazil. So much so that the smart Brazilian illustrated monthly, Sombra, has devoted two whole pages to photographs of the vivacious and photogenic lady, with an appreciative write-up attached.

Traveling back from Brazil with Mrs. Forrestal and her hostess, Mme. Martins, and arriving in the Capital yesterday, were Mrs. Luthero Vargas and her young daughter, Candide. Mrs. Vargas is the daughter-in-law of President Vargas of Brazil and is well known here from her visits with her husband, Dr. Vargas. Dr. Vargas is now in Italy, where he is surgeon to the Brazilian Fighter Squadron.

BOMBARDIER LIEUT. NICKEY Gill, currently home on leave from his base at Gulfport, Miss., is a keen rooter for his home town. Asked by blonde Betty Burton if he didn't think nearby New Orleans was too, too divine, Nickey replied. "I was disappointed in it. I expected it to be more like Georgetown."

"ONCE YOU START moving in Washington it gets to be a habit," says Mme. Fotitch, wife of the former Yugoslav Ambassador.

No sooner had the Fotitches moved from the embassy and established themselves in a comfortable little house on Chevy Chase Parkway than their landlord writes that he will return to Washington and they have 90 days to find another house.

"Perhaps it's for the best," says Mme. Fotitch philosophically. "Now we'll try to buy a house and I will have to remake the curtains but once more."

Adm. Standley To Give Talk

Admiral William H. Standley, former Ambassador to the Soviet Union, is to be the principal speaker at the United Nations Club international current events evening, tonight at 9 o'clock.

His subject is to be "Russia Today and Tomorrow," touching on the customs and living conditions in Russia, and the benefits to be accrued through the mutual help of the peoples of Russia and those of the other United and Associated Nations.

This is one of a series of talks along the line of international brotherhood. A number of dinner parties are scheduled in the flag room preceding the lecture. Among those planning to be present are Dr. and Mrs. Raiko Ruzic, Mr. V. Nicolayevitch, Slavco Cerich, Capt. Leslie Douglas-Mann, C. K. Hsieh, Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Menon, A. Manning and Miss Jessie Thompson.

Mrs. Wichmann 'Adopts' 25 Seabees On Lonely Island; Writes Regularly

By Genevieve Reynolds

She pounds a typewriter eight hours daily. At night when dinner is cooked and dishes washed, she writes chatty, newsy letters to a group of Seabees on a lonely Pacific island. More than 26 boys receive personal notes each week from Patricia Wichmann and her husband, "Hugo."

That isn't all. She spends hours hunting cartoons, jokes and humorous skits to include in the letters. Each week she mails magazines and books to them. You'd think that would be enough to keep this generous woman busy. Not so. She finds time to make cookies and other home-made sweets. Already, she has mailed food and trimmings for a Christmas dinner.

On Island X, present habitat of the group, only inhabitants are natives. "There aren't even 'burr-heads.' To date we haven't seen a child or a woman. Occasionally we see a native man," writes Albert (Pat) Powell, a former Washington bus driver, who acts as spokesman for Mrs. Wichmann's adopted pals across the ocean.

In a recent letter he told how the boys had built a clubhouse. All food packages which Mrs. Wichmann sends are put at his table. "The Seabees have dubbed it 'Pat's Diner'," he says, "in your honor" (Mrs. Wichmann).

Sends Fishing Flies

Not only does Patricia Wichmann cheer up homesick soldiers with letters and food, she persuades her friends to do the same. Her husband also has become so interested in the project that he sends them boxes of fishing lure. Incidentally, he has hundreds of lovely flies which he ties himself. His friends maintain that he is an authority on the art.

Mrs. Wichmann became interested in the group when a discharged serviceman made a plea to the public to help relieve the tedium of his buddies still on the island.

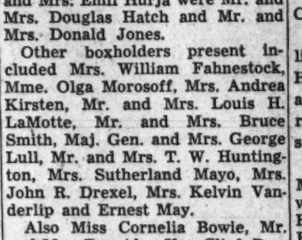

Writing letters to GI's may not sound like much work. But when a woman earns her living as a public stenographer, as does Mrs. Wichmann, she has no inclination to pen notes for fun. Hers is a real service and sacrifice. And whenever she shows up at a club function, the girls are sure to be cajoled into writing to some lonely serviceman.

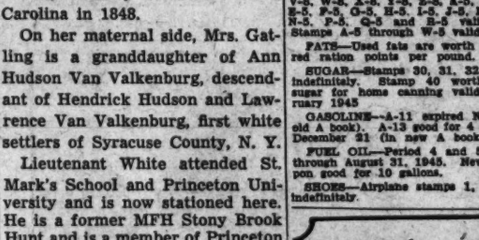

Bits of This and That . . .

Members of Entre Nous Club are busy making comfort bags for servicemen at Walter Reed Hospital. Presentation will be made at the annual Christmas party. . . . The Rev. The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

IT HASN'T LEAKED INTO PRINT, but General Electric President Charles E. Wilson, former vice chairman of the War Production Board, has a lot of big business moguls boiling mad at him.

"I though being in the government was hell," the big Irish production wizard remarked a little whimsically to a friend, "but this is worse."

However, Charlie Wilson is sticking to his guns. He made a speech in Atlanta, recently, proposing low prices after the war and high wages. The reception from big business was the chilliest he has ever received. The automobile people were especially irate. Word from inside the industry is that they planned to ask OPA for a 30 per cent price rise over 1942, perhaps settle for 20 per cent. So they have been calling Charlie Wilson all sorts of names, beginning with "traitor" and going on up.

Wilson spoke in Atlanta before a group of General Electric distributors, plus other business men. His two chief points were:

1. Industry must have the full cooperation of labor after the war. Wages must be higher. "The take-home pay on a 40-hour week basis after the war must eventually represent the higher level of earnings that now prevail." (In other words, labor working 40 hours should get what it now makes in 48 hours.) But labor, in return must give industry more output. It must do some thinking to help industry, instead of promoting the slowdown. That's the only way we can make the system work.

2. Prices must be low, within the range of labor to buy. "This world's got to be built around the boys who have been fighting this war," Wilson said in conclusion. "We've got to give them jobs. This is the day of the common man."

Give 'em Money to Spend

Afterward, a friend jokingly remarked, "What have you been doing—talking to Henry Wallace?"

Wilson's reply to this and the criticism of his business friends is: "How am I going to sell my refrigerators if we don't give 'em wages to buy with?"

General Electric sold 500 million dollars worth of goods in 1940, expects to sell 800 million dollars by paying high wages and keeping prices down after the war.

Note—After his Atlanta speech, Wilson got a frantic wire from Undersecretary of War Patterson and Secretary of the Navy Forrestal urging that he make no more. Patterson was afraid Wilson would get people's minds distracted from warwork, cause people to leave for private industry. Forrestal didn't feel as strongly as Patterson, but was persuaded by Patterson to sign anyway.

Byrnes Forestalls Baruch

It was largely the persistent, persuasive charm of Barney Baruch that caused former Justice Jimmy Byrnes to change his mind and remain as War Mobilizer. The President very much wanted Byrnes to stay and several times told him so. But Baruch, who has been able to wield a powerful, hidden hand in the Government through his fellow South Carolinian, pulled skillful, energetic wires to that purpose.

One wire was Harry Hopkins. A few weeks ago Baurch had told a friend that he considered Hopkins one of the most sinister influences in Government. But that didn't prevent the charming Wall-Streeter from calling on Harry and having him use his influence to keep Byrnes on as War Mobilizer.

Baruch also talked to Byrnes himself at great length. Finally he climaxed it all with a call on FDR.

As Baruch was leaving the President's office, a call came through to Byrnes' office, at the extreme opposite end of the White House, saying that Bernie was on his way. Whereupon Byrnes picked up the phone, called the President and told him he had decided to remain on the job until the war with Germany was over.

"Why did you do that?" asked a friend, puzzled over the fact that Byrnes had called while Baruch was en route to his office.

"I just didn't want Baruch to be able to say that he persuaded me to stay," said the War Mobilizer, with a broad grin.

Merry-Go-Round

BIGGEST CROWDS in the halls of the Pentagon Building these days are officers hanging around vending machines, waiting for them to be filled with cigarettes . . . Newly elected Senator "Cowboy" Glen Taylor of Idaho is first cousin to spinxlike Harold Dixon Young, who steers Vice President Wallace's political fortunes . . . One of the best jobs of keeping the Nation informed about its servicemen is quietly being done by Col. Al Warner and Col. Ed. Kirby at the War Department, both doing a bang-up job with the popular "Army Hour."

Bonus Question Up for Study In Greenbelt

Three by-la wamendments and a Christmas bonus payment to employes will be among the items of business to be discussed at the quarterly membership meeting of the Greenbelt Consumers Services this evening at 8:15 o'clock in the Municipal Auditorium, Elementary School building.

The members also will be asked to decide whether the board of directors be authorized to enter into a contract with the general manager and will hear a recommendation that fees paid to the directors be discontinued.

Editor Reappointed

Mrs. Anne Hull was reappointed editor of the Greenbelt Cooperator, local weekly newspaper published by volunteers, and Donald H. Cooper was elected president of the Greenbelt Cooperative Publishing Association at the annual dinner-meeting held Monday evening.

Mrs. Elizabeth St. Clair was reelected secretary, Miss Catherine Tucker was named treasurer and Cooper will serve as business manager on a temporary basis.

Scout Objectives

Twelve objectives have been set up on a month-by-month basis for the Greenbelt Boy Scouts of Troop 202, according to Scoutmaster John Waldo. Patrol leader training is being stressed this month along with the completion of the sanitary system at the local campsite, standardizing of first aid equipment and the start of a program to film the troop activities in color movies.

Waldo has set an objective to have each scout attend at least 45 of 52 meetings annually and for each scout to advance at least one rank every six months. One troop hike for each month, in addition to the overnight hikes, is also planned for the next year.

Other objectives include supplying firewood for the American Legion home, starting a salvage collection campaign, building patrols to maximum strength, each scout contributing work toward the camp development project and more active participation in district and council activities.

Alphabetical Offshoot

Omaha, Nebr., (U.P.)—Spebsqsa is the diminutive form of the name of a Nebraska organization. It stands for Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America, and is an offshoot of Ak-Sar-Ben, a State service organization.

Net of Pepco Declines 27% During Month

By S. Oliver Goodman

Net income of the Potomac Electric Power Co. continued to decline in October, showing a 27 per cent decrease as compared with the same month last year.

Despite a substantial increase in kilowatt hours sold during the month, Pepco's net in October totaled $302,655 as compared with $415,795 in the corresponding 1943 month. A factor in the sharp drop was a $85,000 debit provision during the month representing a rate reduction ordered by the Public Utilities Commission, but which is still in the court's hands.

Operating revenues for the month were 2.75 per cent higher at $1,880,749 while operating expenses and taxes were 12.3 per cent heavier.

Net income for the first 10 months was $3,139,422, a drop of 11.09 per cent as compared with $3,531,166 in the same 1943 period. Provision for the ordered rate reduction was $670,000 for the 10-month period. Operating revenues for the period totaled $18,809,905, virtually unchanged from the $18,768,477 in the same 10 months of 1943.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

Yule Clubs to Pay Off

Two Washington banks and one in nearby Maryland will distribute Christmas Club savings next month, it was learned yesterday. At one time many banks operated such clubs, but in recent years the systematic savings program has been discontinued by the majority of local banks.

National Capital Bank will distribute about $116,000 to 1700 members. Industrial Bank will pay $232,736 to 8050, and Prince Georges County Bank & Trust Co. will send checks for $190,805 to 2922 members.

Check Funds Continue Rise

Checking accounts at member banks continued to rise rapidly during the week ended November 15, the Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday .

The increase at reporting member banks in 101 leading cities was 790 million dollars and the total on November 15 was $38,417,000,000, nearly six billion dollars higher than a year ago.

The member banks' holdings fo United States Government obligations rose 416 million dollars to a total of $39,883,000,000.

Estate Planning Discussed

Estate planning was discussed by J. Wesley Clampitt, trust officer of the Union Trust Co., at a dinner meeting Monday night of local members of the American Society of Chartered Life Underwriters. President T. Loehl O'Brien presided at the session in the Sheraton Hotel.

Earnings Statements

American-Hawaiaan Steamship Co. and subsidiaries report net profit for nine months ended September 30 of $931,575, or $2.22 a share, compared with $1,032,075, or $2.43 a share, for the same period last year.

Pan American Petroleum & Transport Co. reports for the September quarter net profit of $1,507,455, equal to 32 cents a share, against $656,226, or 14 cents a share, in the three quarters of 1943. The profits reported are subject to renegotiation.

American Zinc, Lead & Smelting Co. and wholly owned subsidiaries report net profit for nine months ended September 30 of $527,943, equal to 40 cents a common share, compared with $551,271, or 41 cents a common share, for the same period in 1943.

Local Produce

Eggs and Live Poultry

(Prices paid net f. o. b. Washington.)

EGGS—Market firm, demand continues to exceed supply with good grades rather scarce. Some Western ungraded stock on the market and few small lots of current receipts were also reported. Prices paid for Federal-State graded eggs received from grading station November 21: Whites, browns, mixed colors, U. S. grade A, large, 58; U. S. grade A, medium, 49; U. S. grade B, large, 48; U. S. grade B, medium, 38. Commercially graded, large A, 55@57; medium, 43@47; large B, 43.

LIVE POULTRY—Market firm; as is usual Tuesday receipts were somewhat heavier with five full loads arriving. The situation remains unchanged with the demand far in excess of available supply.

TURKEYS—Two light truck loads of live turkeys arrived this morning. The demand remains heavy with prospects of many unfilled holiday orders.

Stocks Stage Best Advance In Two Months

New York, Nov. 21 (AP).—The stock market's recovery move was extended selectively today in one of the best average advances for more than two months with rails and industrials adding fractions to a point or so, on expanded volume.

The day's rise was accomplished in the face of considerable Wall Street attention devoted to the war loan drive. Year end tax adjustments caused scant worry although the bulk of these still was to be heard from. Individual issues were propped by cheering dividends and earnings. Sentiment, as a whole, seemed buoyed by the good battle news from the Western Front.

The direction was upward from the start. Dealings slackened after midday and, while top marks were reduced here and there at the close, plus signs were well in the majority.

WHAT STOCKS DID	Tues.	Mon.
Advances	524	374
Declines	150	215
Unchanged	214	214
Total issues	888	803

The Associated Press 60-stock composite was up .4 of a point at 55.2, second-best combecak since September 15. Transfers of 863,720 shares compared with 691,840 the day before.

At peaks for 1944 or longer were Southern Pacific, Union Pacific and General Street Castings preferred. Prominent front liners included Santa Fe, Southern Railway, Chrysler, United States Steel, United States Rubber, Montgomery Ward, Standard Oil (N. J.), Texas Co., Kennecott, Eastman Kodak, Westinghouse, Johns-Manville and J. C. Penney. Among losers were duPont, Dow Chemical, American Can, Philip Morris and Goodrich.

Railway loans pushed ahead in the bond section. At Chicago wheat was unchanged to 70⅜ of a cent a bushel and rye ⅞ to 1⅜ advanced. Cotton slipped 35 to 40 cents a bale.

Greyhound Votes Extra Dividend

Chicago, Nov. 21 (AP).—Directors of the Greyhound Corp. today increased the annual dividend rate on the common stock from $1 per share to $1.40 per share and declared an extra dividend of 15 cents.

Both the extra dividend and the first quarterly dividend of 35 cents per share at the higher rate are payable December 21 to stockholders of record December 6. Payments per share for 1944 will total $1.25.

Dividend payments on the common for the past three years have included an extra dividend of 25 cents per share in addition to the regular $1 rate.

The directors also declared the first quarterly dividend of $1.06¼ per share on the newly issued 4¼ per cent preferred stock, also payable December 21 to stockholders of record December 6.

Creation of Jobs Seen Postwar Need

New York, Nov. 21 (AP).—Clarence Francis, chairman of the General Foods Corp. today told grocery manufacturers that they must produce jobs at a "much faster" rate in future.

Speaking at the second and final day of the thirty-sixth annual meeting of the Grocery Manufacturers of America, Francis said "we cannot go back to the employment figure of 1940. There was too much unemployment then, and our labor population has subsequently grown."

Murray Shields, economist associated with the Irving Trust Co., said that war had sharpened the public appetite for quality products which they could now afford for the first time.

Eastman Dividend Up

Directors of Eastman Kodak Co. declared a dividend of $2 a share on the common, payable January 2 to stock of record December 5. In preceding quarters this year $1.25 was paid, bringing payments this year to $5.75, compared with $5 in 1943.
